For 85 Years

It's been 85 years now, since Texas A&M threw open its doors to those first 40 students that brisk October afternoon, ushering in a new era in Texas education.

It's been 85 years of growth and progress; of dedicated service to the state and nation. It's been 85 years of producing men who can handle any situation; of producing leaders for every walk of life.

And yet the original aim of the Texas Legislature in establishing the school outlined in 1876 by Gov. Richard Coke, has remained paramount: " . . . to bring down to the lowest possible figure the cost of an education which shall be at the same time thorough liberal and practical . . . to teach agriculture and mechanic arts . . . without excluding other scientific and classical studies, including military tactics."

The original idea has grown until today nearly 8,000 students receive the best possible instruction in 51 different fields. And the cost has remained such that even students of the most modest means can afford a college education.

The facilities available at Texas A&M today would stagger the imagination of the student of 85 years past. To even list them would require many pages. Just this year, for example, we have watched the growth of a $2-million Plant Sciences Building, a $3-million nuclear science center, a $400,-000 wing on the Physics Building and a $350,000 addition to the Military Sciences Building.

And more projects are on the way—air conditioning for campus buildings, an outdoor swimming pool, an Architecture Building, and on and on.

But today, as in the past, it is the men A&M produces that make the school. Men such as were found in the Class of 1917, who volunteered en masse to serve their country in World War I. Men such as the six Congressional Medal of Honor winners of World War II.

These men- proud and dedicated-are still found at Texas A&M. Now, as the school moves forward into its 86th year, these men will more than ever be the measure of her greatness.

Biggest gripe seemed to be a fear other schools might see the picture and make jokes about the Aggies. Biggest fear we've got about the whole situation is that the Aggies may have forgotten how to laugh at themselves.

Here's a situation that could only happen at A&M! We've got 7,694 MEN down here—and. naturally, a girl shortage For years this has been the ingredient of a million and one jokes by the boys at Co-ed U. And who has laughed hardest at these jokes? Us Ags. 'Cause we know the kind of MAN A&M produces.

And to the guys in the picture, if we've caused you any embarassment, it was unintentional. We saw only 100 determined Aggies using their inititive to overcome one of the more serious drawbacks to learning to dance at A&Mnamely a serious shortage of girls.

But then every school worth is its salt has problems.

Counter espionage Department: The CIA could learn a lot from our modern language profs. To improve the language courses here, one sneaky professor disguised himself as "Joe College" and enrolled in a TU summer session Portuguese class. Besides playing havoc with the class average curve, our spy found the students there were using the language lab for "romance" languages other than Spanish and French. Amo, amas, ama.

Over the airwaves this week: "'On The Beam' is a weekly feature of KORA, presented each night Monday through Friday,"

Well, yes, guess that is just about a week

We also learned, via the radio, that "Mr. Wedge has formed a Fourth Brigade."
