Toll In HS Football Fatalities Hits 13

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — The rising toll in high school football fatalities is very disturbing, Stanford's Jack Curtice, president of the American Football Coaches Association, said Thursday.

"We've certainly got to find out whether any weaknesses in equipment or in training can be overcome so we can better protect these youngsters."

Curtice made his comment after the 13th high school player death of the young season was reported. The 13th fatal football injury victim was Kenneth Crouse, 15, sophomore at Conrad, Iowa. He died Wednesday night of a brain hemorrhage.

Kenneth was hit over the temple by an opposing player's knee in making a tackle. He was wearing a helmet.

Curtice's coaching organization has jurisdiction only over collegiate football. But, he declared: "What has been happening this year is very surprising and very disturbing to everyone who loves and appreciates football as a wonderful sport."

He said the college coaches want to co-operate in any possible effort to solve the problem.

"Maybe we need a real fine study of football equipment—of the helmets, the shoulder pads, and all the rest," Curtice said.

In Los Angeles, Dr. Floyd Eastwood of Los Angeles State College said 72 per cent of the fatalities in football come from head injuries.

Dr. Eastwood heads a committee on injuries and fatalities which reports to the coaches association.

He reported that a helmet being developed at Cornell University had worked well in preventing concussions.

Curtice said another factor in the rising fatalities may be the sheer over-all growth in number of players.

"We've been pushing sports competition for our youth so much maybe we haven't enough trained people to supervise it in our growing population."

Aggies Seek Second Win In Roll As They Face Trinity

The Aggie footballers will be looking for their second win of the season this Saturday night in San Antonio as they battle the Trinity University Tigers at Alamo Stadium.

This was the only game the Aggies won last year when they downed the Bengals, 14-0.

Series Started In 1902
In a series that has seen 21 games since 1902, the Aggies have come out on top 17 times, Trinity once and two ended in ties. Three games have been played since the early '30's and the Cadets have won all of them. Trinity's only triumph was in 1903 when they won, 18-0.

Coach Jim Myers and his players are not looking past the Trinity game as if it were a breather. Myers said:

"Trinity has a good ball club, sparked by an exceptionally good passing attack triggered by three fine quarterbacks. They have a better team than last year. We hope to be ready for what could prove a very tough ball game."

Hargett Is Hurt
After a week of fairly rough workouts, the Aggies will not be in top shape for the game Saturday night. Three Ags are definitely out of the game, George Hargett, Jim Harper and Mike Swan.

Hargett, the starting left halfback, received a bruised shoulder in the Tech game and will be out for an indefinite period. Harper, junior letterman from Borger, is still ailing from a leg injury. Swan, a sophomore guard from Athens, will miss his third consecutive game with a bruised thigh.

Only one change was made in the Aggie lineup this week and that was the moving of Jim Murphy to the first team in the place of Hargett.

It will be homecoming at Trinity this weekend and also homecoming for two San Antonio boys on the Ag squad. Wayne Freiling and Wayland Simmons, products of Thomas Edison High in San Antonio, will be playing before the home folks for the second time. They will help keep the team spirit up for the game.

Myers Was Pleased At Tech
Myers was pleased with the team's performance in Lubbock last week against the Texas Tech Red Raiders. He said, "It was our best effort of the year. Tech was playing at home and was fired up, but our players responded with a great effort."

The team will leave Aggie land for San Antonio by chartered bus Saturday morning and will return home Sunday morning.

Arkansas, Baylor In Crucial Battle

There aren't enough days in the week to get ready for Baylor. That's the studied observation of Razorback Coach Frank Broyles as his Arkansas team crams for an examination in Waco this Saturday night.

"This situation ought to be the other way around," commented Broyles as he observed the pregame practice schedule. "Here we are with four days to get ready for a team that has made over 1,000 yards in total offense against us in three years. And," he added, "they've had two whole weeks of rest to study us and get ready for a home game. How in the world do you figure that?"

The Arkansas dilemma is a real one. Not even powerful Mississippi owns such impressive offensive credentials over Arkansas in the Broyles era. The plain truth of the series is that the Razorbacks have yet to stop a John Bridgers team—even though the Porkers scrapped out a 23-7 win in 1959.

While the Porkers yearned for offensive polish of their own—time will permit little of that this week. Broyles has allocated a major portion of the practice schedule to defense. "It's like trying to plug five or six leaks with two hands," he admits. "If a team got lucky enough to contain (Ronnie) Bull—(Ronnie) Goodwin or (Tommy) Minter would explode. Or maybe it would be Ronnie Stanley and Bobby Ply, their quarterbacks. Last year the whole crew just ran over us," Broyles observed.

With Arkansas 1-0 in league play and Baylor rated a co-favorite—this is the major contest in the Southwest this weekend.

A HARDY CREW
HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Trinity College's athletic nickname — the fighting Bantams — originated with the school's 1905 baseball team which played 28 games without a substitute.
