On Newspapers

American newspapers are being saluted by a proud nation in observance of National Newspaper Week (Oct. 15-21). Since shortly after the Constitution was written the Bill of Rights has guaranteed United States citizens and newspapers alike the ten freedoms, including freedom of the press.

Americans have enjoyed this freedom so long that perhaps they have begun to take it for granted. Papers sometimes take up a popular crusade or campaign but must be careful to stress complete truth, accuracy and good intentions.

Papers in the U. S. are different from those of many countries. They do not try to make decisions for the reader as in the case of countries controlled by some "can't-be-wrong politicians."

We must protect our freedoms. Whether we want to skim quickly over our newspaper or read every word is left up to us. But in order to protect ourselves from possible aggression we must be armed with truth and the knowledge of present day world and local problems. Newspapers provide us with this knowledge.

Newspaper stories are located for the convenience of the reader.

Stories are written with the most important facts toward the beginning of the article to help give the reader the news first than the details.

Knowledge of the day's events is important in today's modern world. While keeping abreast of current events is not the key to success, success is hard to come by without the knowledge gained by reading newspapers.

MOVIE go ROUND

PALACE
Saturday—★★★★ "Come September" Previously review.

QUEEN
Saturday thru Tuesday—★★★★ "Exodus" Otto Preminger directs screen version of Leon Uris novel about Jewish fight for a homeland. Movie is strong and swift and inspiring. Cast includes Paul Newman, Lee J. Cobb and Eva Marie Saint.

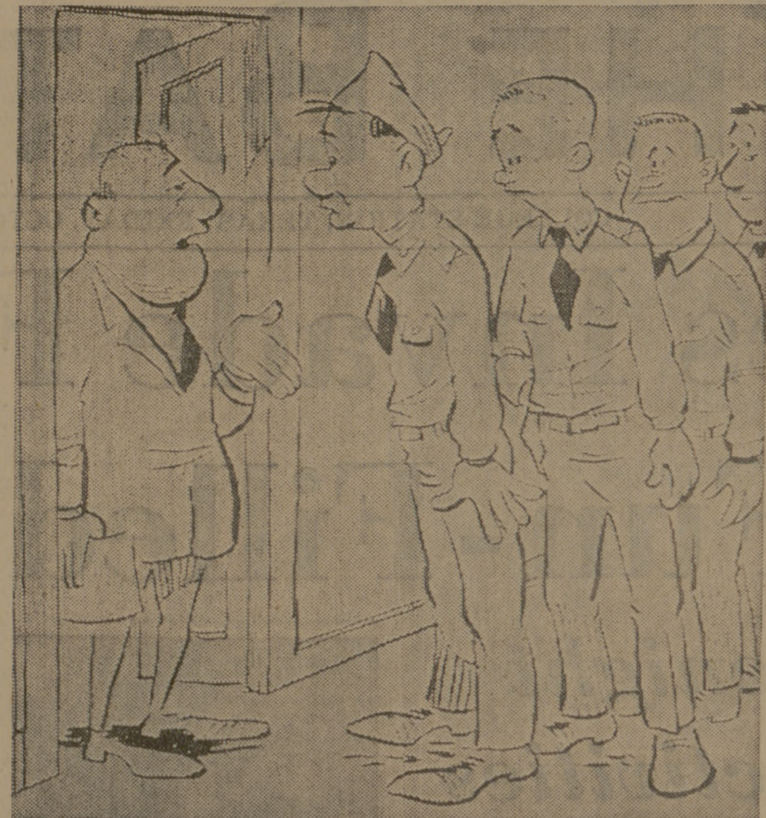

CIRCLE
Saturday Only—★★ "Party Girl" and "The Hangman" and "Desert Hell" In "Hangman," Robert Taylor climbs into elevated cowboy boots, stalks madly about, catches "good-guy" bank robber and, at same time, captures heart of scrubwoman Tina Louise. Yet "Hangman" is best of the three.

Sunday thru Tuesday—★★★★ "Two Rode Together" and "The Silver Chalice" Despite cliché-ridden plot, James Stewart manages to project character of sheriff who wants no part in unrewarded heroics. Richard Widmark portrays idealistic "helper." Virginia Mayo and Jack Palance appear in "Chalice."

He Said

LOS ANGELES (AP)—If nominations are still open for meanest man of the month, Sheldon M. Balas has a candidate who may win by acclamation on the first ballot.

Balas, 28, owner of a car wash, left his wedding reception at the Ambassador Hotel Wednesday night to visit the rest room. Inside, he met a sour-faced little man who said:

"You look happy. What's wrong?"

"Wrong?" said Balas. "There's nothing wrong. I just got married. I'm happy, that's all."

"Well," said the gloomy little man, mellowing. "I'm a married man myself. Let me give you a present. I'm a cab driver and my cab's parked outside, with the keys in it. Use it in good health. Drive it all you want and send the bill to the Friendly Yellow Cab Co. Consider it a wedding gift from me and the company."

Balas thanked the stranger, fetched his bride, Deveda, and drove off.

They didn't pay much attention to the guy standing back at the hotel, yelling his head off. This, of course, was the real driver of the cab, David Krieger.

Krieger phoned his boss, who phoned police, who seized Balas and his wife and carted them off to the police station.

Balas explained what had happened and the cab company said it would press no charges.

The couple left with this admonition from police: "Next time you take a cab, make sure it's got a driver."
