Big Tim Clears Boards

Fish Outscored By Yearlings, 80-75

After a brief flicker of hope with 1:39 left in the game, the A&M Fish basketball team had to bow to a last minute offensive drive by the Texas Yearlings and lost their sixth contest, 80-75.
The Yearlings led by a respectable margin through most of the game. But later in the second half the Fish momentarily caught fire and threw a score into Texas. With exactly two minutes left in the game Paul Timmons dropped a short jump shot from the side to tie the game 72-72. Steve Carter of the Shorthorns quickly added two more for Texas.
An all-important play followed with 1:39 left in the contest when Tim Timmerman scored two to retire the game and was fouled in the act by formidable John Paul Fultz of the Yearlings. Fultz left the game for excess fouling and Timmerman sank the free shot to put the Fish ahead for the first time since early in the game, 75-74.

Carter and Dean Greenwood hit six points worth of pay dirt for the Shorthorns in the next minutes, however, and the Fish had to give in.
Timmerman and Fultz shared the game high-scoring honors with 21 points each. Timmerman outdid his Texas adversary in the rebounding department, however, and was high man with 13.

A&M's favorite basketball team—the Aggies—had one of their coldest nights of the season but they won another "must" victory over their arch-rivals—the Longhorns of Texas, 54-48, last night in G. Rollie White Coliseum.

With the victory, the Aggies regained a share of the Southwest Conference lead as SMU defeated Texas Tech in Lubbock, 68-63. Now the Mustangs, Red Raiders and the Aggies are tied with identical SWC records, 6-3.

The Aggies could hit only 14 times from the floor out of 46 attempts for 30.4 per cent, but the free throws meant victory as it does so many times. The Longhorns were not much better in field goal shooting as they made good on 18 out of 50 for 36 per cent.

Broussard Scores 25
Carroll Broussard, the Aggies' brilliant forward, was almost all the attack for A&M as he took game honors with 25 points—nearly half of his team's points. Fifteen of these points came from the charity line as Broussard hit on 15 out of 19 free tosses.

Texas' junior forward, Ron Weeks, was high man for the Steers as he dropped 13 points through the hoop.
The contest was slow beginning as the referees were on top of every play. A total of 50 fouls were called during the game, but an oddity was that only two players fouled out—one for each team. Many of the fouls were argued to the utmost, mostly for the Aggies side.

An overflow crowd of 8,500 watched as the Aggies won their 20th consecutive home game.
Winning Quinet?
Ag Coach Bob Rogers and Texas Coach Hal Bradley never could seem to find the "hot" five and both benches were cleared before the contest was over.
Texas jumped off to an early lead, but the largest margin it could muster was 4-1. Then with the foul shooting of Broussard, the Aggies final pulled steadily ahead. At the intermission, A&M lead, 26-20.

In the second half the Steers gradually started catching up with the Cadets. With 13:28 left in the game, Texas' Jimmy Brown hit on a turn jump and the game was knotted at 30-30. Once more Broussard pulled his team out of reach from the free throw line.
The lead by the Aggies stayed at about six points until the final 48 seconds of the game. Thirteen points were scored in these last seconds and at the end, A&M had revenge an earlier loss this season to the Longhorns.

In the rebound department, the team grabbed 43. Broussard was high for A&M with 10 while Fisher pulled 11 off the board for Texas.
Runner-up to Broussard in the scoring column for the Aggies was Bernie Lenox who hit for 11 points.
