

MOVIE go ROUND

Palace
Through Tuesday —  "Sergeants Three" Sinatra and clannish-romp — rather clumsily — through their conception of a Western. After all, a nightclub act is a nightclub act is . . .

Queen
Through Tuesday — * "Spartacus" As Spartacus, the gladiator-revolutionary, Kirk Douglas bares his teeth, does all sorts of muscular goodies, and in short plays the chest-beating hero. Upstaging him throughout the movie are Peter Ustinov's twitch of lip here or gesture there, Charles Laughton's quiver of jowl here or dropped eyelid there, and Jean Simmons' impressive beauty anywhere.

Campus
Tentatively through Tuesday — * "La Dolce Vita" How can "Vita" be adequately described? One might, of course, mention the subtlety of the camera work, the honesty of the dubbed lines, the intensity of the performances, or the complexity of the script. Or one might laud the insights provided in to the supposedly extant depravity of upper-class Rome. Then too one might discuss the symbolic meaning of the girl who reappears only to wave to the protagonist near the film's end. More simply, however, one might do best by merely giving the viewer some ideas about what he will have to talk about after he has seen "Vita."

Circle
Saturday only — "Cavalry Charge" and  "The Burning Hills" and  "A Face in the Crowd" "Charge" — unreviewed "Hills" is a so-so Western; Tab Hunter wears the big gun. Andy Griffith, star of "Crowd," fits well his part as the country boy who finds success only to have it turn sour.

Sunday thru Tuesday — * "Back Street" and "The Key" "Street" — previously reviewed; "Key" — unreviewed.

Skyway
Saturday only — * "Sergeant Rutledge" and "Tess of the Storm Country" and "Tomboy and the Champ" "Rutledge" — previously reviewed. "Country" and "Champ" — unreviewed.

Sunday thru Tuesday —  "Splendor in the Grass" and "The Miracle" "Grass" — previously reviewed; "Miracle" — unreviewed

Guion Hall
Saturday only — "Operation Mad Ball" and * "From Here to Eternity" "Ball" — unreviewed. Starring Burt Lancaster, Montgomery Clift, and Deborah Kerr, "Eternity" is the screen adaptation of James Jones' first — Sunday only — * "Gone with the Wind" A classic in the history of movie-making, "Wind" probably still holds the title of "greatest picture made about the Civil War," if for no other reason than lack of competition.
