

MOVIE go ROUND

Palace
Through Saturday —  "Majority of One" A take-charge, middle-aged American woman meets an Oriental industrialist. Apparently love blooms at no time so fair — or so humorously — as it does in the after-fifties. As vibrant as in "Auntie Mame," Miss Russell makes up for Alex Guinness' eyes that don't slant and accent that isn't.
Sunday thru Tuesday — * "The George Raft Story" George Raft should sue.

Queen
Through Saturday —  "Pinocchio" The idea that a puppet can suddenly come to life should interest at least a few local ones.

Campus
Through Tuesday —  "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" Glittering come the horsemen; symbolically, they represent war, conquest, pestilence, and death. Lee J. Cobb, portraying a longtime peace-lover, predicts the coming of World War II, and BINGO! The music rises, the storm clouds roll, and the horsemen appear. His prediction comes at the first of the movie. Okay, you think, that's over with. Not so. For a mid-movie climax, they ride again. Ditto the finish. It's what one might call a 'finishing-off-the-viewer-touch.'

Note: According to George Bernard Shaw, "Silence is the most perfect expression of scorn." And it works both ways.
Circle
Saturday —  "She Wore a Yellow Ribbon" and "One Foot in Hell" and "From the Earth to the Moon" — both unreviewed.
Sunday thru Tuesday — * "Flying Leathernecks" and  "Operation Petticoat" — both previously reviewed.
Guion Hall
Saturday —  "Can-Can" plus * "Return to Peyton Place" Concerning the latter, only by "returning" to Peyton Place could bad acting shine against pitiful writing.
Sunday — * "Guns of Navarone" T. Nickell

Tax Agents Disrupt Peace Of Arkansas Town, People

FORDYCE, Ark. (AP) — A task force of tax agents will move out of this southern Arkansas town today leaving the 3,890 residents undecided about which is worse—death or taxes.
About 30 Internal Revenue Service men moved into the basement of the post office March 5 and began calling in taxpayers for audits of their returns.
The result was a 50 per cent slump in business, the chamber of commerce said, and a mass case of nerves for the people of Fordyce and Dallas County, of which it is the county seat.
"The people aren't mad, they're hurt," said Kelsey Caplinger, who operated a men's clothing store. His tax return was checked and a fire loss was disallowed, but no penalty was assessed.
The IRS wouldn't say how many returns it checked, but Mayor Thomas Wynne, who also is an attorney and tax consultant, estimated the number at 1,000. The population of Dallas County is 10,522.
Fordyce's economy depends on the Fordyce Lumber Co., which employs about 700 men in turning the vast pine forests of southern Arkansas into lumber.
Some lumbermen have been allowed to deduct the cost of their gloves, Wynne said, and others have not.
Wynne is puzzled about his own business. "I'm licensed to practice in tax court," he said. "I've been doing returns for 10 years and things that I've always done are not being accepted."

Students Contest Death of SWCSA

By RONNIE FANN
Battalion Staff Writer
The Southwest Conference Student Association was killed when Texas Tech vetoed the measure Tuesday.

This association and its proposals stirred conflict and dispute on virtually every campus in the Southwest Conference, including A&M.
The Student Senate here soundly defeated the issue, and Malcolm Hall, president of the student body, strongly denounced it, causing rumbles of discontent both here and at the University of Texas.

Students here are seemingly behind Hall, but offer other reasons for not wanting to accept the proposal.
Vernis Haynes, from Baytown, commented that the association "Has good points and bad points. Maybe it would have permitted better relations between schools. They had some other good suggestions too, but I believe that, as the idea stood, it would have given a few people unnecessary power and prestige. I believe that we ought to check into the National Student Association.

Probably the most ironic feature of this proposal is that some of the student body has little or no idea of what the Southwest Conference Student Association was, or what it stood for.

The most repeated reply to the question of what to do about SWCSA is "What is the SWCSA?" Most students only know that it had to do with the University of Texas, and therefore probably had strings attached.
