

Pass In Review

Seems an Air Force fish was out at PW Saturday morning as an aggressor. As those Army tactics are wont to be he wound up confused and running the problem with the rest of the junior ROTC cadets.

A lab instructor we know was busy teaching his lab Tuesday afternoon. He turned his back. He shouldn't have, because a Corps senior and two civilian students bailed out the window to the outdoors beyond. A sophomore walking by the building was slightly surprised at the escape.

(A few days ago a copy of The Lexington (Virginia) Gazette for Wednesday, March 14, reached our desk. The anonymous sender had marked the following story, but offered no explanation.

We guess he is an Aggie Ex, now living in Lexington, who was reprimanded while at A&M for blowing up a building.

We hope that readers with other, more logical explanations will keep their ideas to themselves.—Ed.)

Ruins At V.M.I Recall Incident Of Earlier Years

Workmen clearing brush on a hillside across from the Virginia Military Institute cadet barracks recently uncovered a hole in the ground and scattered bricks reminding of a long-ago incident which makes present-day campus pranks seem like child's play.

Back in 1884, a group of cadets blew up an entire building, performing the job in such spectacular fashion that only the bricks and the hole the workmen uncovered remained to tell the tale.

The hill, now the site of several faculty homes, was formerly known as "Magazine Hill" because of the location there of a brick structure which had been used to store munitions. By 1884 it had fallen into disuse and to accomplish the job, the cadets involved smuggled several hundred pounds of powder from the VMI ordnance storeroom through a hole bored in the wall. The deed apparently was done by a secret group known as the "Molly McGuire's" after a lawless society which terrorized the Pennsylvania coal regions in labor disputes following the Civil War. The VMI explosion apparently was in protest of a regulation curtailing the activities of secret fraternities at the Institute. Fraternities subsequently were entirely banned and none has been permitted since.

The names of those who blew up the building were never officially learned and several cadets expelled for complicity were later allowed to re-enter the corps, an indication that college authorities in those days were able to take a calm view of such minor disturbances as the demolition of an entire building.

New Tabber Snap

The authentic British tab collar.

Here's a college shirt with the distinctive tab collar minus the nuisance of a brass collar button to hold the tabs in place.

The tabs snap together under the tie knot giving you the crisp, clean "savoir faire" look. Try Tabber Snap for a change of pace in striped oxford white and colors.

ARROW

From the "Cam Laude Collection"

ARROW introduces a new tab collar profile

Give your neckline a lift with the Tabber Snap collar so ingeniously contrived it takes only seconds to adjust the tabs under the tie knot.

Smart for college men who want a distinctive collar change and true comfort. See us for a complete Arrow selection of shirts, ties, underwear.
