Seeks Social Job

Editor,
The Battalion:
I, Jim Schnabel, would sincerely like to represent the Class of '64 as its social secretary.
Among my qualifications are experience and desire. I am presently holding the office of social secretary for the Range and Forestry Club and in the past years I have been social secretary for numerous school and religious organizations. My second qualification, desire, is exemplified in my strong will to be one of the hardest working officers the Class of '64 has ever had and I believe that my grades are sufficient to allow me the time needed to accomplish this task. During my freshman year I was selected as my outfit's outstanding freshman and I am presently serving as guidon bearer. I honestly believe that I am qualified for the office of social secretary.

If elected I will strive to bring more unity between civilian and corps students since both groups must work together to be efficient. I will work with other officers to promote the most outstanding junior prom and banquet A&M has ever witnessed. If you will show your confidence in me by casting your vote in my favor, I will give my full effort to prove to everyone that the Class of '64 is the best class that ever came to A&M.

Lyons, Summers Want Yell Leader

Editor,
The Battalion:
In the current election campaign for class officers and yell leaders for the Class of '64, most or all of the candidates have made the same promises that every candidate of every class before them made.
Candidates for junior yell leader have said in open letters to The Battalion that they are "fully qualified" to be a yell leader.

Just what makes up qualifications for the job of Aggie Yell Leader? Physical co-ordination and a loud mouth? Not entirely. These help, of course, but just what is it that makes these individuals stand out? I think it's the genuine and sincere interest they display in the college, its traditions, and the students in it. The popular catchall term is "Spirit." Aggie Yell Leaders have spirit. It's what got them their job. Anyone can get in front of some people and holler. But the job of the yell leader is not to "holler," it is to inspire others to yell. It is to lead and consolidate the efforts to preserve the Aggie Spirit and traditions. It is to represent the "Texas Aggie" to other schools and to the public. It's a big job and a tough one, at times. It's no place for one who "thinks" that he would "like" to be a yell leader. It is a place for one who "knows" that he "will" make a good yell leader.

I am physically co-ordinated, have a loud mouth, and definitely have a genuine and sincere interest in the college, its traditions, and its students. On the voting machine you will find a lever marked "LYONS"; it's your key to a capable yell leader.
Daniel F. Lyons, '64
Candidate for Yell Leader

Editor,

The Battalion:
Despite what many authorities have said, I believe that the most outstanding single contribution to the reputation of Texas A&M is the Aggie Spirit. Recently there has been a lot of emphasis on changing the old to the new, but just because something is old doesn't necessarily mean that it is bad. I think that any determination of Aggie Spirit, either through negligence or otherwise, would seriously harm our school.
I would appreciate your vote and your support. In return I can promise that I will fight to preserve and to improve the spirit which has always characterized Aggies.

'Fish' Muller For Soph Prexy

Editor,
The Battalion:
Our fish year is finally drawing to an end and it is time to start thinking of the changes we want to make in order to better our class. My name is Frank Muller and I am running for president of the Class of '65. I believe that my past experiences as president of my junior and senior class in high school qualifies me for this position.
I don't offer you any false promises, but I do offer you sound judgment, equal representation, and, above all, incessant attention in all matters to better our class. In all sincerity, if I am elected, I don't intend to sit tacitly in office and perform only the required duties. I want people on this campus to know the Class of '65.
Last year, less than half of our class turned out to vote. This year don't be a "two-percenter." Vote. And I hope that I will be your choice.
Frank Muller, '65
Candidate for President

Soph Veep Job

Editor,
The Battalion:
I'm Eugene Triesch and I sincerely hope to be elected as your vice president. As vice president of our class, I would serve you to the best of my ability.
Tomorrow is election day, and

I urge you to come out and vote. As "fish" we do not have many privileges so let's take advantage of this one. It is not only your privilege, but also your responsibility! So cast your vote tomorrow for the man of your choice. I will appreciate it very much if your choice is me. Remember: E. T. for V. P.

Astronomer Set For Campus Talks Thursday, Friday

An astronomer with the Lowell Observatory in Arizona will discuss the "Sun's Neighbors" during a graduate lecture at A&M at 8 p.m. Thursday.

Dr. Laurence W. Fredrick of Flagstaff, Ariz., will present the lecture, along with film slides, in Room 113 of the Biological Sciences Building on the campus. The public is invited.

During his stay at A&M, Fredrick will present three other talks, in addition to the graduate lecture, in Room 146 of the Physics Building.

He will discuss "Solutions of Eclipsing Binaries or an Overlooked Distant Relative" at 9 a.m. Thursday, followed by a discussion on the role of research at 4 p.m.

Fredrick, at 11 a.m. Friday, will lecture on "Astrophysics and Image Intensifiers."

Before joining Lowell Observatory in 1959, Fredrick served as an assistant professor with Sproul Observatory in Pennsylvania. From 1945-48, he was in the U.S. Navy, serving with the intelligence service.

A member of the American Astronomical Society, he is a recognized authority on astrometry, eclipsing binaries and image intensifiers.
