Golf Has Become Colorless, But Spectators Don't Mind

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF
Associated Press Sports Writer

Golf has become quite colorless, mainly because it has reached a near state of perfect organization.

Now the fans go out to see the boys play solely because of the skill involved and not for their rhubarbs with the sponsors, club throwing and arguments with the crowd.

There is little reason for such shenanigans. Everything is covered by the rules, there is enough money offered that the golfers want to make every tournament they can get to and they don't want to spend time arguing about something when there is important money to be won.

It was only a decade ago that sports writers spent more time reporting the rhubarbs than telling about who was playing the best golf. The reason was that the rules had not been worked out to cover all phases of tournament play and more important still the sponsors and the PGA were at loggerheads on just about everything.

Today there aren't many rhubarbs but the crowd isn't even missing it. Now it is a question of being able to accommodate all the people who want to see a tournament. The PGA also is finding it difficult taking care of all the cities that want tournaments. There are 50 played in the nation each year with over $2,000,000 in prize money. There also is a Caribbean tour.

How did golf arrive at its present placid state? The Texas Open was held for the thirty-eighth time recently. It accentuated the progress of the game.

The Texas Open was the first "big money" event. Back in 1922 it offered $5,000 prize money. Until that time tournaments didn't have enough to be won for a golfer to pay his expenses of getting there.

The Texas Open has been the scene of some of golf's greatest rhubarbs. But it was at the Texas Open that the present great organization of golf sponsors started and M. P. (Monk) Wilson, then president of the San Antonio Golf Association, was the organizer. He got sponsors of the winter tour to band together in an effort to reach agreements with the PGA over how golf was to be operated.

Hank-McCormack Bout Set June 14

GLASGOW, Scotland (AP)—Henry Hank of Detroit, fourth rated middleweight, will fight ex-European middleweight champion John McCormack in Glasgow June 14, Scottish promoter Peter Keenan said Wednesday.

He said the winner would meet NBA champion Gene Fullmer of West Jordan, Utah, at a place and date yet to be decided.

Ags Are 5th Among Twelve At Water Polo Jr. Nationals

A&M's water polo team took an impressive fifth place finish in the Junior National Water Polo Tournament at West Point, N. Y. last weekend.

Coach Art Adamson's team won three games and lost three in the three day meet. Adamson said the team, which had not played in competition this year, did a "real good job."

"They received a lot of attention and impressed everyone with their play," Adamson said.

There were 12 teams entered in the tournament with A&M.

The Aggies defeated Army's plebe team twice by 14-1 and 7-6 counts. The Farmers' other win was against Saint Francis Prep by a 12-8 score.

Losses were handed the Cadets by New York Athletic Club, 8-6 in a hard-fought double overtime, and 5-4. The Ags took their third loss at the hands of St. Francis
