Famed Researcher Speaks During Annual Beef Course

A Texas Experiment Station researcher whose studies of the qualities of meat have won wide recognition is scheduled to speak during the twelfth annual Beef Cattle Short Course here.

She is Dr. Sylvia Cover, professor, foods and nutrition research, Department of Home Economics, of the experiment station. The chemical and physical factors involved in tenderness of meat is among her major research interests.

The Beef Cattle Short Course will be held July 30-Aug. 1. Approximately 165 persons have attended these short courses in past years.

A wide range of topics will be considered during the short course, which will end after the morning session on Aug. 1. The core of the conference is beef cow nutrition and supplemental feeding topics.

Among the speakers will be two from out-of-state. They are H. Knox, head of the Department of Animal Husbandry of New Mexico State University, and J. N. Wiltbank, animal physiology at the U. S. Department of Agriculture Beef Cattle Research Station in Crawford, Nebraska.

75-Year-Old Woman Gives People Home-Cooked Bread

GALVESTON—(AP)—In 22 years, 75-year-old Mrs. W. P. Gilder has made and given away close to 500,000 old-fashioned, homemade, yeast rolls to friends and church groups.

"Enough rolls," one observer estimated, "that if placed end to end would run the length of Galveston's 32-mile shoreland."

Long ago, the energetic Mrs. Gilder lost count of the number of blue ribbons she has won from her baking and cooking skills.

dealing with meats and has presented papers at national scientific meetings.

She was honored in May by the Association of Former Students, receiving their Faculty Distinguished Achievement Award for her Research efforts.

"But I don't care about prizes and blue ribbons. I just love cooking and baking," said Mrs. Gilder, who has volunteered her services as kitchen supervisor at Trinity Episcopal church here for 15 years.

A kitchen could hardly be better equipped than Mrs. Gilder's. She said it represents an investment of something like $4,000.

She averages making more than 250 rolls weekly and during Lent turned out 6,000.

A&M Professor Writes Article For Magazine

The lead article in the summer 1962 issue of "The North Carolina Historical Review" is one on "Religious Toleration and Politics in Early North Carolina," by Dr. Haskell M. Monroe, assistant professor in the Department of History and Government.

Monroe, a native Texan, received the Ph.D. degree in history from Rice University and wrote his dissertation on the "Presbyterian Church in the Confederacy." The newly published article is on a different phase of religious activity and shows that the Lord Proprietors of Carolina used a promise of religious freedom to populate their grant of land which originally extended from Virginia to Spanish Florida. "Only when religion became involved in provincial politics did toleration cease," Monroe said.

Monroe has published several articles dealing with phases of the Civil War.

He is spending the latter half of this summer doing research in southern depositories and in the National Archives in Washington, D.C., and in the Library of Congress, utilizing a research grant made to him by the American Council of Learned Societies.

BALA KRISHNA . . . predicts trouble

Professor Named Research Director

Dr. J. H. Quisenberry, head of the Department of Poultry Science, has been appointed Director of Research for the American Poultry and Hatchery Federation.

The appointment came during a recent meeting of the American Poultry and Hatchery Federation at St. Louis, Mo. Quisenberry was selected by the organization's Board of Directors.

From $10,000 to $15,000 of APHF funds are designated each year for research projects in poultry departments of land-grant colleges and universities. The function of the director is to encourage development of research projects, to screen projects submitted, and to make recommendations to the Board of Directors for allocation of grant funds to aid in support of proposed projects.

Indian Predicts Border Fighting

DALLAS (AP)—A native India who came to the United States two years ago believes border trouble will further estrange India and Red China. But he does not believe this will change India's traditionally neutral position between the West and the Communists.

He is Bala Krishna, who has just completed instruction in Yogi at the Dallas YMCA and YWCA. He has taught in most sections of the nation. He is from the state of Kerala.

Bala Krishna said in an interview that the long-standing friendship between India and China began to crack when Red China invaded and took over Tibet. "We lost respect over Tibet," he said.

He said that despite border friction, "I don't think China will attack. India is also a big country." He said that India's geography, with its high mountains and other difficult terrain, would make it hard to conquer.

Bala Krishna added, "I don't think they will ever go back to friendship. Ideology is a part of it, but generally the big change came because of the border clashes."

He said he is scheduled to return to India soon and has an appointment with Prime Minister Nehru.

The teacher of the physical branch of yogi—as contrasted to forms of yogi intended to bring spiritual and mental improvement—said relations between the United States and India remain very good.

Asked if he has encountered conflicts with acquaintances in the United States because of India's neutral position in East-West disputes, he said, "I find no difficulty in any way."

Bala Krishna said the people of India and her leaders definitely favor the United States. Pointing to the atheism of Communism, he declared, "India is a religious country. If you believe in God, you feel no other way than favoring the United States."

He felt India may buy its warplanes in Britain rather than Russia.
