

Daniel Boone May Rove Once Again

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP)—Daniel Boone, who was always the roving kind during his lifetime, may be moving along again before the year is out.

Gov. Bert Combs has indicated he wants to transfer the famed pioneer's tomb to a more accessible tourist site in Frankfort.

If that's really Boone in the tomb, of course.

At present Boone's purported bones are in the city cemetery on a hill overlooking the Kentucky River. Buses can't get to the cemetery and the grave is hard to find.

"You have here," Combs told a civic gathering recently, "perhaps the most fabulous figure in American history—and hidden from visitors."

"You have here," says more than skeptic, "the bones of a slave."

Boone rests in peace in Missouri.

It was back in 1845 that the city cemetery board, promoting the new cemetery, arranged to have the bodies of Boone and his wife, Rebecca, transferred from Marthasville, Mo., some 25 years after their deaths.

A big parade and celebration followed and two bodies eventually were buried in the cemetery, topped by an impressive monument.

The monument eventually was chipped to pieces by voracious souvenir hunters. The second or third monument—no one is certain which—contained a tall statue of Boone, complete with coonskin cap and rifle.

Earlier this century lightning struck a tree nearby and a heavy limb crashed into the statue. All that's left today is the base of the monument.

As for who is underneath, everyone agrees that Rebecca arrived in 1845. But the argument that the wrong man came along still smolders during otherwise orderly historical society meetings.

Combs is extremely interested in the tourist trade.

He has decided the grave might do wonders for tourism if it were placed in the rear of the Capitol, atop a hill near Frankfort's park or on the lawn of the old restored Capitol downtown.

He even talks of building a national shrine around it.

Most letter writers, however, want Daniel and Rebecca moved deeper into the Blue Grass country. Heavily favored is a site near Boonesboro State Park which includes Ft. Boonesboro where the old frontiersman once lived and fought.

Clubs Plan To Welcome National Guardsmen

Fourteen Bryan-College Station clubs have begun a study plan to welcome home Bryan's men in the 49th Armored Division Headquarters and Headquarters of the 386th Engineer Battalion.

Red Sandlin, immediate past president of the Bryan Lions Club, named chairman of a committee to confer with service club representatives in relation to their plans for welcoming the National Guardsmen.

Sandlin said each service club representative will meet with the board of directors of his club to draw up individual plans for that club. He stressed that the clubs are urged to use their individual initiative to come up with ideas to be used in welcoming activities.

W. O. (Bill) Davis of the Rotary Club, military affairs committee chairman for the Brazos County Chamber of Commerce, and Gus Lampe of the Kiwanis Club were assigned to work on the committee with Sandlin.

Sandlin said he plans to contact all the service club representatives today, and hopes to have more concrete plans in the making before the end of the week.

The National Guardsmen are scheduled to come home Tuesday, August 7. Sandlin expressed hope that the people of the community will line the sides of the highway to welcome them as they arrive.

In all probability, according to Sandlin, the guardsmen will arrive from the Huntsville cutoff which connects with Highway 6 south of College Station. They are expected to arrive about 3 p.m.

Mustering out is to take place on Aug. 9 for citizen-soldiers. Plans are also being made for a program to honor the guardsmen at that time, probably about 4:30 p.m.

Tables may be set up near the National Guard Armory with refreshments available for guardsmen and their families.

NSF Schedules Special Speakers

Three special speakers have been scheduled for National Science Foundation program participants here this summer.

Dr. Robert H. Heller of the University of Minnesota will speak at 8 p.m. Thursday on "Earth Sciences in the Secondary School."

Friday at 2 p.m., Dr. K. R. Tefertiller of the Department of Agricultural Economics will discuss "Linear Programming Applied to Agricultural Economics. He will speak in the Chemistry Building, Room 231.

"Solar Research" will be the topic of Dr. John W. Evans of Sacramento Peak Observatory, Sun Spot, N.M., Monday at 8 p.m. The public is also invited to this lecture in Room 113 of the Biological Sciences Building.

Daniel State Water Backers Launch Conservation Campaign

By VERN SANFORD
Texas Press Association
AUSTIN—Gov. Price Daniel and water conservation leaders are launching a campaign to win voter approval of Constitutional Amendment No. 4 on the general election ballot Nov. 6.

Daniel's Statewide Water Conservation Committee will meet on Sept. 10 to map the campaign. Other statewide organizations are being urged to join the effort.

This amendment would allow the Texas Water Development Board to use part of its $100,000,000 water loan fund to pay for the added height needed to fully utilize damsites in Texas.

Story is this: When cities or the Federal government build reservoirs, there may not be enough demand for water in the area to build the dams to their full height. Water studies have indicated that in 20 to 50 years, the full yield of all presently proposed reservoirs will be needed to supply the 21,000,000 Texans expected by the year 2010.
