Journalism Assistance Offered By Dallas Press Club Group

The Press Club of Dallas Foundation has expanded its scholarship program to include the Department of Journalism.

A $500 grant to be available for distribution as scholarships for the 1962-63 academic year increases to $3,250 the amount of scholarship funds available to journalism majors for the new year, Delbert McGuire, department head, said.

Raymond Holbrook of the Dallas bureau of the Associated Press serves as president of the Press Club of Dallas Foundation. The club makes decisions each year on schools to receive funds.

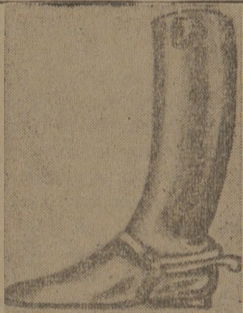

"The department," McGuire said, "will select the recipients and determine the amount of individual scholarships, but the foundation asks that the money be distributed on the basis of need and demonstrated ability in journalism." Another stipulation is that assistance goes to journalism majors planning to enter the news field and to students of at least sophomore standing.

"We plan to use the $500 Dallas Press Club grant, as we are using other scholarship funds, to encourage capable students to enter and remain in journalism as a career field," McGuire said.

Oct. 19 — The Smothers Brothers and Leon Bibb, featuring a full evening of folk singing and humor. Bibb sings folk songs in Harry Belafonte style.

The group has headlined the Jack Parr Show, becoming extremely popular on the big club circuit, Robert L. Boone, director of the series and musical director of the MSC, pointed out.

Nov. 2 — Dick Schory's Percussion Pop Orchestra, featuring 19 musicians and 119 musical instruments for a night of the "big band" sound.

Nov. 7 — Leonard Bernstein Gala, including the music of Bernstein at the opera, at the ballet and on Broadway.

Feb. 15 — American Jazz Ensemble, a night of jazz.
March 14-15 — Basil Rathbone, known for his reading of Shakespeare that leaves an audience spellbound. He also recites various poems and discusses intelligently many other topics of general interest.

Climaxing the year's performances in April will be a mystery guest, according to Boone. Exact date will be announced later.

The Town Hall Series tickets, available for faculty, students and residents of Bryan and College Station, will go on sale later this month.
