

Football In Wrong Season?

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF
Associated Press Sports Writer

football this year — in two instances there were deaths—brings to mind the fact that the grid game isn't being played in its season anyway.

Football is supposed to be a fall-and autumn-game. Back 40 years ago it was unheard of to start football in summer. It always was around Oct. 1 when the boys in the moleskins and leather helmets got going.

Of course, in those days football didn't attract the crowds and wasn't considered the greatest sports attraction. With the upsurge of interest, it was but natural for the backers of football to want to lengthen the season and get in as many games as possible.

They are moving it up more every year. The pros begin in July, the high schools in August, the colleges September 1, or, in some instances, earlier.

THE ALMANAC says autumn begins the third week in September. That's the first time there can be weather favorable to young men working in the ponderous regalia of the grid game.

Football could start Oct. 1 and there would be 10 dates for games if the season extended into mid-December. That is, in the southwest and the south. Of course, in the east and midwest it becomes too cold to play football in December. But it's cool enough to start in September in those areas.
