Time Article Stuns Campus

In a week full of big stories, none received such impact as the article in A&M in this week's issue of Time magazine.

Written by a former member of the faculty in the Department of English, the article is still on everyone's lips and has provoked various comments and even letters to the magazine's editors.

No statement has been made by the administration, however, and the controversy seems to be slowly fading away.

Webb To Speak At Convocation

James E. Webb, administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, was named principal speaker Tuesday for the A&M Convocation here Nov. 16.

The System Board of Directors' response to the Century Council, awards to former students and various open houses and special programs are scheduled during the all-day festivities.

Webb was named director of the huge NASA project by President Kennedy in 1961. Previously he served in law, aviation, business and education.

Enrollment Passes 8,000

Fall semester enrollment was officially placed at 8,097 Monday after the end of registration the previous Saturday.

The figure is well over last fall's 7,694 and the highest here since 1949.

Gridders Drop Season Opener

Nationally ranked LSU spoiled Hank Foldberg's debut as head football coach by whipping the Aggies, 21-0, last Saturday in Baton Rouge.

Nevertheless, the Cadets are favored to notch their first '62 win Saturday night over the Houston Cougars. The Cougars knocked off Baylor last weekend, 19-0.

Library Plans Big Expansion

Construction plans to more than double A&M library facilities were announced Thursday by Library Director Robert A. Houze and Dean of Instruction W. J. Graff.

The $1.5 million expansion program is due to be completed by 1965. Work will begin next summer.

Preliminary drawings are being prepared to enlarge the present Cushing Library building and to build around and over the Texas Engineers' Library building.

The new construction will be two stories and linked architecturally with existing facilities. Later stages of construction will provide two additional stories to add space deemed necessary for library needs through 1996. Ultimate cost of the entire expansion program is estimated at $3,800,000.

New divisions will also be provided in the facility for the filing of books, periodicals and other documents.

SCONA Hits Year's Budget

SCONA VIII confirmed Wednesday that the approved budget of $18,660 has been reached through donations and sponsors. Finance Committee Chairman John Krebs reported that $12,600 is now on deposit and almost $7,000 is expected from other sponsors and delegates' registration fees.

The massive canvass for funds began last Easter when students began calling on businessmen throughout the state. This summer more volunteer workers called on prospective patrons in untapped Texas cities in addition to possible sponsors in Louisiana and Mexico.

Bonfire Looms As Big Rush

Initial planning for this November's bonfire began Thursday with the fast realization that only two full working days will be available to construct the stack.

Preliminary work will begin during the week of Nov. 12-17, with full-scale construction delayed until Sunday, Nov. 18. The A&M Convocation Nov. 16 and Rice football game Nov. 17 have added to the delay. The blaze will burn Nov. 20.

Sound Off

Editor, The Battalion: Since I have been here at A&M all I have heard about is studying, grade points, grade flags, etc.

With all this emphasis on grades it seems only logical that the mess halls would serve coffee with the evening meal. I am sure a cup of "dope" or two would prevent one from passing out during Call to Quarters and would improve grades.
