TCU Enrolls First Negroes

Three Negroes were included among more than 6,200 students who have enrolled for first semester classes at Texas Christian University.

The three, all women, enrolled without incident in the university's Harris College of Nursing.

Other enrollment figures show 4,089 regular students, 556 graduate students, 1,469 in the evening college and 163 in Brite College of the Bible.

Last fall's enrollment totaled 6,309.

Baylor Students Dance In Streets

Students at Baylor are dancing in the street — maybe because enrollment has passed last fall's total and maybe because Barney the Bear is eating again.

Actually the street dance was only a portion of the Heart O' Texas Fair held in Waco last week.

But enrollment has reached 5,399 — over 200 above last fall's 5,120.

And Barney is actually eating again. The mascot has been ill again. The mascot has been ill but coke and sugar during his illness.

According to his trainer, the 12-year-old mascot is now eating more solid food, moves around more, holds his eyes open and even scratches.

Vast revamping plans have been announced for Baylor's student radio station, KYBS.

Emphasis on the change will lean to more music, with campus news casts at five minutes before each hour. According to the station manager, the new sound will be patterned after KXYZ in Houston and KRLD in Dallas.

Machines Added To SMU Center

Vending machines have replaced the snack bar in Southern Methodist University's student center.

The machines will replace an ordinary snack bar and should decrease sufficiently the number of man hours needed to accommodate student customers, the center's director said.

Under the new system the snack bar will also be open any hour the building is open.

Missing Soph At UT Found

A state-wide search for a missing University of Texas sophomore has been called off by the boy's mother.

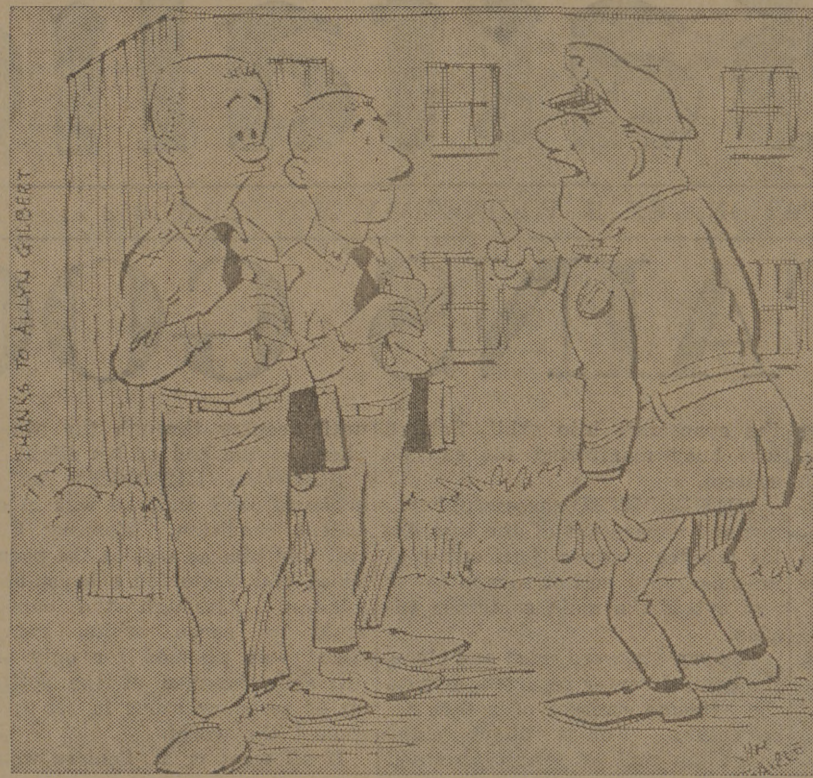

The youth disappeared after leaving his Houston home for Austin to register for the fall semester. The mother told officers her son had been found, but did not indicate where.

During the search his auto was found in Grand Prairie and officers speculated he might have gone to Odessa. He lived there before moving to Houston.

He was carrying $300-400 at the time of his disappearance, his mother said.

Red Surge In Viet Nam Worries U.S. Authorities

By PETER ARNETT SAIGON, Viet Nam (AP) — The possibility that Communist guerrillas massing in South Viet Nam's central highlands may try to grab a provincial capital late this year and proclaim a rebel government, even for a brief period, is worrying the Vietnamese government and U. S. military authorities.

The guerrillas may be tempted to do this, it is reasoned, to get international recognition for their movement, similar to the manner in which the Communists capitalized on paratroop Capt. Kong Le's coup d'etat in Vientiane, the capital of neighboring Laos, in August, 1960.

Kong Le overthrew the pro-Western regime and proclaimed a neutralist government. Even though he later was driven back into the hills, the Communists insisted that the neutralist premier, Prince Souvanna Phouma, remained the head of the legal government of Laos.

International pressure resulted in the formation this year of a coalition government, thereby nullifying efforts to keep Laos a pro-Western bastion.

The threat of a similar happening in South Viet Nam has been increased, American sources say, by Communist realization that massive injections of U.S. aid into this country have slowed down attempts to take over the country militarily.

The three key provincial capitals that are logical targets of the Communists are Pleiku, Kontum and Quang Ngai, all either in or bordering the central highlands where the Communists have had virtual control since the end of World War II.

Vietnamese intelligence says that complete battalions have moved south from North Viet Nam into the mountains in the past eight months and guerrillas already in the area have been organized into battalion and regimental units.

They are known to have heavy mortars and automatic weapons, mostly old stock, that was used effectively in later stages of the Indochina war against the French.

American advisers in Saigon picture a situation in which a strong Communist force might strike at a provincial capital heedless of losses, overrun it and proclaim to the world that a legitimate and "neutralist" government has been formed.

Then they could go back into the mountains before government reinforcements arrived.

(Editor's Note: The following letter concerning sportsmanship was sent Student Body President Shelton Best by Horace Wilkinson IV, president of the Student Government Association at LSU.) Dear Sheldon:

I would like you to know what an extreme pleasure it was to have you and the other Aggies who came for the game here at LSU this past weekend. I have heard nothing but complimentary remarks from students all over the campus in regard to your brief stay here. I only hope the impression which we left with you was comparable.

The ATO's in particular, enjoyed your company, and I can assure you that this was the first time an Aggie yell leader has conducted any sort of pep meeting in any fraternity house at LSU.

Again, I would like to express my happiness for the relationship our student bodies now seem to have, and I feel certain that this relationship will continue many years to come. If you happen to be in Louisiana please contact me.
