'Web Of Life' Made Theme Of A&M State Fair Exhibit

A&M's Department of Wildlife Management is handling this year's School of Agriculture exhibit at the Texas State Fair in Dallas, according to Dr. Richard J. Baldauf, associate professor and assistant department head.

Baldauf, who is chairman of the planning committee for the exhibit, said the theme of A&M's exhibit is "The Web of Life." The display was set up Saturday and will run until Oct. 21.

According to Baldauf, an entire building is set aside for the exhibit, which has as its main attraction a 70-foot model representing the five major types of environment in Texas. Most of the material for the replica is actual soil and foliage brought to Dallas from over the state.

AROUND THE walls of the building, facing the central display, are booths representing the 12 major divisions of Texas.

The central display was constructed by the Peter Wolfe Corp., builders of Broadway and Hollywood sets, under the direction of the A&M planning committee. The Texas Game and Fish Commission also helped with the exhibit by supplying photographs and some of the animal specimens.

Limestone, cedar and grasses were hauled in from the Edwards Plateau region to construct a "hill country" in the center of the main display. In this higher, middle area of the replica are simulated springs and the beginning of an actual, water-filled stream.

Baldauf said the stream flows down out of the hilly region through south Texas plains and brush country, complete with mesquite, cactus and grass of that area. It continues to the "Gulf Coast," where actual beach sand, shells and driftwood are formed into a coastal habitat.

SPECTATORS continue on past the beach area to the East Texas "pine forest." Loads of characteristic red sand, pine needles and cones, plus some 12-foot pine trees are used to create this atmosphere.

The final stop for viewers walking clockwise around the rectangular model is an area of devastation and waste, says Baldauf. A dirty, polluted stream, burned out trees and eroded soil show the effects of man on the outdoor areas of Texas.

Baldauf explained that there is a spiral-like, "Web of Life" symbol at each station in the building, with each one showing man removing another strand. The "web" collapses at the last station.

AT EACH STATION in the central display are six telephones where spectators can hear a taped message about three minutes long. The message relates bad conservation practices in the area before the viewer and gives possible solutions to important problems there.

According to Baldauf, each of the 12 district booths that form the perimeter of the exhibit shows the major agricultural products of the region it represents and photographs or stuffed specimens of the important animal forms found there. Live specimens are used only in a few instances because of the length of the showing.

Doctoral Grants Now Available

Announcement of the availability of doctoral dissertation fellowships in natural resources for 1963-64 for Resources for the Future, Inc., has been received.

The announcement received by Dean Wayne C. Hall says competition is open to students who have finished all requirements for the doctorate, except the dissertation, before the start of the 1963-64 academic year.

Each fellowship will carry a basic stipend of $2,500 and there is a schedule of dependency allowances.

OSU Faculty OK's Buckeye Bowl Bid

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Ohio State University's faculty council approved Tuesday a policy of participation in the Rose Bowl football games, reversing its stand of last season.

The council voted 36-20 to approve a recommendation of the university athletic council made Sept. 26.

The participation is approved, the recommendation said, so long as a formal contract is in effect between the Big Ten and the Athletic Association of Western Universities. Such a contract was resumed this year after a lapse.

Last year, the faculty council turned down a Rose Bowl recommendation, touching off loud protests from OSU students and fans of the Buckeye team.

The Buckeyes won the Big Ten title last year but couldn't accept the Rose Bowl bid. This year they are the favorites to take the title again.
