Directors Approve Room Rent Hike

An increase in dormitory room rent to $20 per month was announced this week by the A&M System Board of Directors. The directors, meeting in Austin, approved the increase to become effective June 1, 1963. Main reason for the decision to hike room rent was the fact that dormitory fiscal operations have been in the red for three of the past four years. In addition, several improvements and other construction projects are on tap. Among them are improved lighting in the halls, new roofs on 16 dormitories, interior renovations in Dorm 13 and new furniture in several of the present dormitories.

'Who's Who' Selects 37

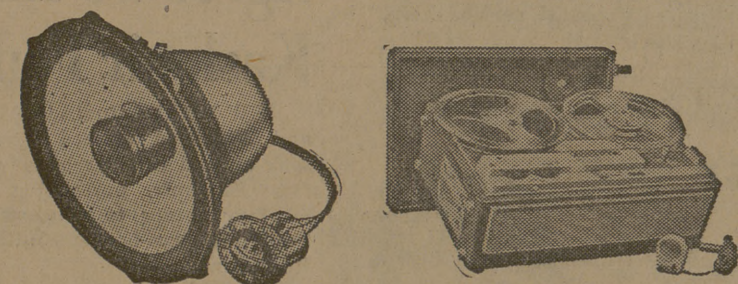

Thirty-seven Aggies were named during the week to "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities." The announcement was made Tuesday by Dean of Students James P. Hannigan. Students chosen for the honor were nominated by students and faculty-staff members. A staff-student selection committee selected the winners, who were then approved by the national Who's Who headquarters. Factors considered in the selection were scholastic standing, leadership, contributions to the school and extracurricular activities.

85 Freshmen In Election

Eighty-five freshmen were approved during the week for positions on next Wednesday's freshman election ballot. The an-

CADET SLOUCH

by Jim Earle

"... I wonder if we might interrupt this discussion of the recent 'letters to the editor' long enough to hold class?"

Sound Off

Editor, The Battalion: With the split between the Corps and civilians apparently widening again (witnessed by recent letters to The Battalion), it would seem to us that many Aggies have forgotten that A&M was founded as an institution of higher learning. Yet after reading what Chris Schaefer would erroneously claim to be a piece of masterful prose, we cannot help but wonder how we civilian students have put up with this sort of venom for so long. For the fact is that A&M is run by the Corps, for the Corps, in spite of the fact that civilians are in the majority. If the Corps were so good and beneficial as its supporters claim it to be, there would obviously be no reason for the Corps to always be on the defensive. Everything wrong with A&M is blamed on the civilians. Civilians are "two percenters" because few of them attend yell practices, only upholding the tradition of the 12th Man by standing throughout football games and "talking it up." Non-regs are criticized for not whipping out and speaking, when the traditional handshake has become cold and impersonal, and a mechanical "Howdy!" better left unsaid. A Corps Aggie has even said that he would like to see the civilians isolated in some part of "leper colony," only allowed the concession of attending classes here. We will vigorously defend the traditions of Aggieland still worth defending, but those traditions are becoming increasingly fewer. The tradition of Aggie brotherhood is noticeably dying. The possibility that a non-reg could be even remotely "gung-ho" and have the Spirit that once prevailed A&M is a disgrace to many members of the Corps. As A&M is presently run, it has little to offer civilian students other than a fine (and expensive) education, yet chills run up and down our backs when we sing The Spirit of Aggieland, The War Hymn or The Twelfth Man. It has been suggested that non-regs might leave this "ramshackle place," but we never run from a fight. And that fight, as we see it, is Texas A&M's fight for life as a great institution. Until we as Aggies settle our petty differences, A&M will never rate the title "university." Byron T. Welner, '64

LING-TEMCO-VOUGHT... BRINGING TOMORROW CLOSER TO TODAY

Beneath the sea, beyond the sky or anywhere in between — this is the domain of vehicles, weapons and systems produced by Ling-Temco-Vought. While LTV is a relatively new name to industry, the company is comprised of experienced organizations with far-reaching technical talents. Together these elements are meeting the advanced challenges of military electronics, communications, space, aircraft and missiles and have placed LTV in the enviable position of one of the nation's top ten defense contractors. Today, LTV's activities include such programs as V/STOL, CRUSADER, SCOUT, SATURN, DYNASOAR and a supersonic, low-altitude missile. In addition, the company is supplying specialized military electronic equipment, super-power transmitters for the "Voice of Polaris" radio station, special purpose computers, actuators for MINUTEMAN and scores of other complex products and systems.

Because of this continuing expansion, LTV's divisions have ground-floor growth opportunities for graduates holding degrees in Aeronautical, Mechanical, Industrial, Electrical and Civil Engineering and Math, Physics or Metallurgy. Before selecting your industrial home, consider engineering climate, on-the-job orientation, professional development and location... consider LTV and Dallas — the social, intellectual and cultural center of the Southwest. We invite you to plan your future with us. Contact our representative or write College Relations Office, Ling-Temco-Vought, Inc., P. O. Box 5907, Dallas 22, Texas.
