Honor Exhibit In Architecture Being Shown

The Texas Architecture 1962 Honor and Merit Award exhibit is on display on the fourth floor of the Academic Building.

Examples in the exhibit received awards at the 1962 Texas Society of Architects Convention in Houston last month.

On exhibit are examples ranging from banks, office buildings and commercial buildings to residential homes, apartments, schools and community centers.

Samuel Lanford, assistant professor in the Division of Architecture, said the display exhibits were good examples of professional work. "Architecture considered good by good architects," he added.

CS's City Hall Sets Open House Monday Afternoon

College Station's city hall will observe its annual Christmas open house Monday afternoon from 2-5, it was announced Wednesday by the office of Mayor Ernest Langford.

Coffee and other refreshments will be served at the open house, an annual fete observed for the past 13 years.

"Everyone is invited to come and see our facilities," Langford said in extending the invitation.

Marionette string-pullers were mentioned in the Hindu epic, "Mahabharata."

Not Bad For First Try

Jack, the Mexican burro at the Baltimore zoo, takes a critical look at his first attempt at abstract art. Zoo Director Arthur Watson gave Jack his chance after Khrushchev said that one isn't able to tell if abstract painting is drawn by a man or "smeared by the tail of a donkey." Watson plans more tail paintings for Jack after the summer fly season returns. (AP Wirephoto)

'NO SIGNIFICANCE'

Language Tests Called 'Gesture'

(Special to The Battalion)
St. Louis, Mo.—The proficiency tests in foreign languages required of most PhD candidates in the United States have become "a mere gesture, having little significance as a measure of true learning," according to Dr. Saul Rosenzweig, professor of psychology and medical psychology at Washington University.

In a survey of the use made of foreign languages since graduation among several hundred psychologists receiving degrees between 1948 and 1952, Rosenzweig discovered that almost two-thirds of the degree-holders had not read a single article or book in the supposedly learned language in the seven or eight years since graduation. About 70 per cent had made no oral use of the language.

In most graduate schools reading examinations are required in two foreign languages, most often French and German. Rosenzweig suggested that the stipulation be changed to require a mastery of a single language, with demonstrated competence in speaking and writing as well as reading. He said that the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences at Washington University has now begun to permit students to present a comprehensive knowledge of one language as an option to a reading knowledge of two languages, but that to his knowledge this practice is followed in only an occasional university in other parts of the country.

ABOUT 83 per cent of the 681 respondents favored elimination or revision of the foreign language requirement, thus showing the general disrepute in which the superficial reading knowledge of a language now required is held. Rosenzweig said that although "lip service" is paid to knowledge of a foreign language, in reality the PhD candidate often needs only to pass a brief reading examination.

In some schools an option, such as knowledge of some special research technique, is offered in lieu of one language but no contribution is made by such a substitute toward a more meaningful mastery of the remaining language.
