

Army ROTC Flight Program Opens For 1963-64 Terms

A campaign to contact all prospective students interested in the Army ROTC Flight Training Program to be conducted on campus in 1963-64 has been launched, with interested students asked to complete preliminary application by March 15.

Twenty-one students have been engaged in the Army ROTC Flight Program this year.

The voluntary course, open to students enrolled in Military Science IV or those who have completed the course but have not yet graduated, consists of 6 1/2 hours of instruction. The training is divided almost equally between ground school and flight instruction.

The government pays all expenses of the program, which is conducted at Easterwood Airport. Students accepted for the program must agree to volunteer for Army aviation training and assignment, and to serve on active duty between two and three years. Additional flight training is taken after the student is commissioned as an officer.

Army aviators serve in all of the combat arms and several of the technical services. They receive extra pay upon entering active service and attending the flight training program.

Water Pollution Creates $2 Billion A Year Industry

The field of water quality management has become a $2 billion a year industry, the vice president of the Water Pollution Control Federation reported Wednesday.

Dr. Harris F. Seidel of Ames, Iowa, said the engineering and scientific problems associated with the prevention of water pollution are staggering. Seidel is director of water and pollution control for the city of Ames.

He spoke at a session of the week-long Texas Water and Sewerage Works Association's short school on campus. The association stages the school in cooperation with the Texas State Department of Health, the Southwest Section of the American Water Works Association, Texas Association of the Water Pollution Control Federation and the Texas Engineering Extension Service.

Approximately 600 persons from 170 Texas towns and cities are registered for the school. Eight other states also are represented.

"Our water resources are threatened by toxic chemicals, radio-active wastes, heat pollution and 'modern' contaminants along with increasing loads of the old-fashioned domestic and industrial wastes," Seidel said.

Seidel said one of the brightest spots in the picture of water pollution control in increasing public awareness of how much it costs not to control pollution.

These costs are registered in terms of adverse public health, in increased requirements for water treatment, the loss of recreational natural resource, he pointed out.

Basil Rathbone To Appear At Guion

Students will have an opportunity to hear actor Basil Rathbone give a program of readings as well as take part in discussions at English seminars and informal sessions.

Rathbone will appear March 14-15 in Guion Hall as one of the Town Hall presentations. During his stay here, the actor will make himself available to the Department of English for seminar meetings and for "coffee" sessions with students.

Impressionistic Dancer

Miss Lynn Borochoff, a modern jazz dancer from Sophie Newcomb College, will be one of the 11 acts scheduled for Friday night's ITS. The acts were selected from Southern universities and colleges. The performance begins at 6:30 p. m. in G. Rollie White.

Peace Corps Life Found Interesting

Letters from Aggies serving overseas in the Peace Corps and other youth groups give encouraging reports, according to Daniel Russell, campus liaison officer for the Peace Corps and its related groups.

Wayne La Pori, '60, an agricultural engineering graduate, wrote about "staying in the jungle with a native man and living solely on birds and small animals snared in hand-made traps."

"Not only did we have sufficient food," La Pori said, "but we gave a large surplus to friends when we returned."

La Pori, now in Cambodia, said there are a lot of thrills in living far back in an underdeveloped country studying friendly people whose customs and religions are strange to him.

Another Aggie, Selwyn Hollingsworth, said his first job in Necoya, Costa Rica, was "to brush Brahman cattle in preparation for the Central American Livestock Exposition, which I hope to attend."

Hollingsworth, '62, a sociology graduate, admitted the thought of brushing Brahman bulls sounded like a good reason to return to the U. S., but actually found the bulls "friendly."

"I am convinced that our use of Brahman cattle in rodeos is a crime against this gentle breed," he wrote.

David M. Wallace, now with the YMCA in Moshi Tanganyika, East Africa, had words of advice for current college students:

"Gain a broad understanding of what is going on in the world."

Wallace, a history graduate, said prospective Peace Corps members should not come abroad with "any hatred or animosity toward any group in the country. Try to share your host's way of life, problems, hopes and thoughts about life."

Nelson L. Jacobs, a wildlife management student, is a 4-H specialist in Serraria-Paraiba, Brazil. Jacobs feels his work has helped him to evaluate his future plans.

"After having worked here a reasonable length of time," he said in a recent letter, "I am beginning to see clearer the type of work I plan to undertake upon completion of my formal education."

Freshmen Selected To Polaris Council

Fifty-two freshmen have been selected for membership in the Polaris Council sponsored by the YMCA. Students selected the members, generally the outstanding freshmen in each Corps of Cadets unit, upon the basis of high qualities of leadership.

Purpose of the Polaris Council is to provide a common meeting ground for the students, to present ideas of relevance and to form a nucleus of young men who are aware of their responsibility to the campus and to the world.

Joe E. Baggett of Annandale, Va., was elected president of the council. The vice president is Jack B. Holt of La Marque and the secretary-treasurer is John R. Childers of Mart.

Country-Western Performers Killed In Private Plane

CAMDEN, Tenn. (AP) — The shattered bodies of Patsy Cline, Hawkshaw Hawkins and Cowboy Copas—all top country singers—were found Wednesday in the wreckage of a small plane which crashed near the Tennessee River. The "Grand Ole Opry" stars along with their pilot and Miss Cline's manager, Randy Hughes, 35, were killed Tuesday night when the plane plunged to earth on a wooded hill, five miles northwest of here and 85 miles west of Nashville.

They were returning to their Nashville homes from Kansas City, Kan., where they had given a benefit performance for the family of Cactus Jack Call, a radio disc jockey killed in a recent traffic accident.

Inquiries and expressions of sympathy came from virtually every state to WSM, Nashville radio station which is the home of the 35-year-old Opry country music program.
