More Picketing At Texas U.

Picketing demonstrations are on the move again in Austin with Texas University students demonstrating in support of an ordinance making it illegal to refuse service to a person because of race or color.

Some 75 demonstrators gathered Saturday in front of two downtown Austin theaters in a three-hour march. Among campus areas picketed this year are women's dormitories and the Forty Acres Club.

Baptist Leader Gives To Baylor

Dr. J. M. Dawson, Baptist leader for separation of church and state, formally presented his personal collection of writings to Baylor University. The materials in the collection will be used in Baylor's church and state program which was started in 1957 and named in honor of Dawson.

Parking Fees Levied At TCU

The TCU trustees have authorized the levying of a fee for parking on the campus. Instead of banning cars owned by groups, such as the freshman class, as is done on some campuses, they suggested a "zoning plan" and an annual charge for parking permit of up to $10 a car a year.

SMU Opposes Censorship Bill

SMU's Student Senate leaders mailed copies of their resolution opposing a proposed censorship-of-foreign-films bill and proposed amendment to members of the Texas House of Representatives. The group is in opposition to the bill because of what it considers unreasonable rules regarding censorship of motion pictures.

SMU's $500,000 Sustainment Fund Drive, the largest in the history of the university, exceeded its 1962-63 goal with a total of $507,000. Some 1,250 volunteer workers labored through 16 campaign divisions to secure the goal, which provides about five per cent of the operating budget for the school. The goal represents about one-third of the 15 per cent of private gifts that must be raised yearly to meet operating costs of SMU.

Tech's Problem Is Communications

Lack of communications was slated as the greatest problem facing campus organizations at Texas Tech in a recent Board of Student Organizations retreat. Ideas presented at the meetings indicated that students have no way of communicating with administrative officials and officials do not communicate with the student body.

One student's comment was, "The Toreador (Tech's campus newspaper) is contributing to this lack of communication in that it does not serve the needs of the organizations on campus." Others said the lack of communication is largely due to apathy on the part of the student body.

Improvement In Red Camp May Hurt Western Nations

"... and with spring coming on, I figured I needed to replace my 2 1/2-gallon wastecan with a 5-gallon job!"

WASHINGTON (AP) — Any improvement in relations between the Soviet Union and Red China will almost certainly lead to a hardening of Soviet policies toward the United States and other Western nations.

Reports from Moscow and Peking that leaders of the two big Communist powers are moving toward a reconciliation are getting close attention in high official quarters.

Washington authorities are extremely skeptical about the Reds' chances for eliminating the split which for several years now has increasingly divided and weakened the Communist camp.

But officials say that Soviet Premier Khrushchev and Chinese leader Mao Tze-tung undoubtedly are under a number of pressures to try to bridge the gap. Foremost among these compulsions to unity, it is believed here, may be a desire to take advantage of the present rift within the West.

BEHIND DEFENSE OF STALIN

A Smoke Screen Was Hidden

By WILLIAM RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

The long shadow of the Chinese Communist party may have played an important role in Premier Khrushchev's startling defense of Stalin. The Soviet leader's latest speech could reflect an attempt to heal a painful split in the world Communist movement.

Ostensibly, Khrushchev's aim was to read the riot act to artists and writers for being too enthusiastic in denouncing Stalin. Actually, Kremlin events at the end of last week hint that the Soviet party was laying down a smokescreen to cover a tightening up all along the line, not only in the Soviet Union but in the world movement.

The Friday meeting at which Khrushchev lectured party leaders, writers and artists was preceded by a Thursday meeting attended by the top brass of the Soviet party. The unannounced reasons and results of that Thursday session would be far more interesting than what was made public.

Khrushchev triggered de-Stalinization himself with his secret

1956 speech to the 20th Soviet party congress: In doing so, he created two worries for himself.

First, the relaxations which set in contributed to growing westernization in the ideas of the Soviet younger generation.

Second, de-Stalinization became one of the major causes behind the Soviet-Chinese battle. The Red Chinese never agreed with Khrushchev. They resented his so-called liberalization of communism.

The latest Khrushchev performance coincided with new Peking-Moscow maneuvers edging toward the possibility of a top-level meeting on the deep differences between the two parties.

In the wake of the Khrushchev blast, the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia announced that Red Chinese leaders had accepted the Soviet Premier's proposal for talks to end the public wrangling.

Apparently, somewhere in the upper reaches of the Kremlin, somebody agrees with the Chinese that de-Stalinization has been used as a tool to break down Communist party control.

If Khrushchev is to mend the break in the Red front, he will have to start at the bottom, where cracks in the edifice can be most harmful. To the Chinese, the idea that there can be peace between ideologies is the most dangerous of all.

Khrushchev has agreed. From now on, he announces, such nonsense must stop. He warns that any notion of peace between ideologies will be "backsliding into positions of anti-communism."

This will serve the Kremlin and the party leadership in several ways. First, it is a sharp warning to the younger generation to get into line and stay there. Second, it is a warning that the Communist party leadership must be beyond all blame for any wrongs committed by Stalin, despite the obvious fact that the older generation of leaders cooperated fully with the old dictator. Third, it is a signal to Communists abroad that the day when heresies are tolerated is just about over.

If this is the Kremlin attitude, it could go a long way in mollifying the Red Chinese. But it seems unlikely Peking will want to make peace with Khrushchev himself. In their view, he has gone too far to be wholly absolved. The indications are that they'd still like to see him removed from power.
