Wainerdi, DuBeau Author Science Magazine Article

Two A&M men, Dr. Richard E. Wainerdi, head of the Activation Analysis Research Laboratory, and Bernard DuBeau, director of information and publications for the A&M System, are co-authors of the lead cover article in the current issue of Science Magazine which was distributed internationally Tuesday.

"Science" is the official publication of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

When a man says "no" to life insurance, one of three things will happen . . .

1. He will buy it later and pay a higher rate for it because he will be older.
2. He will never buy, and his family (or his old age) may pay for it in sorrow.
3. He will wait too long, and find out alone why not buy life insurance for him.

Would you be sorry today . . . if you had bought more life insurance 10 years ago. Don't delay, see

Garrison Appoints CS Woman To State Civil Defense Post

Col. Homer Garrison Jr., director of the Texas Department of Public Safety, has announced the re-appointment, effective March 12, of Mrs. Grace M. Martin of College Station as state consultant for women's activities in Civil Defense and Disaster Relief.

Garrison, who is also state coordinator of Defense and Disaster Relief, said, "Mrs. Martin has served in a civil defense capacity in state government for the past 12 years. Her work in this field is one of outstanding achievement and talent and she is recognized nationally as an authority on the role of women in civil defense planning. We are indeed fortunate to have her on our staff."

GEN. RAYMOND MURRAY

Gen. Murray Talks To Marine PLC's

Twenty-seven years ago, a young second lieutenant left A&M with a Marine commission in one hand and an Aggie ring on the other. Saturday he returned to Aggie-land—he still had both.

Maj. Gen. Raymond L. Murray, '35, is one of the three highest ranking former Aggies in the history of the college. Murray visited the campus this weekend to see some colleagues and to take a look at future Aggie Marine officers.

While on campus, Gen. Murray spent two hours visiting with Aggie PLC's and answering questions.

When asked about the American fighting man of today, Gen. Murray answered that the American of today is a much better fighter. When a young man of today first enters the service he has a hard time accepting the discipline required, but in the long run he is a much better fighting man, he said. The reason he is a better fighter is that he is smarter—"he knows how to think," the general said.

Agriculture Group Begins Conference

Agricultural Extension Service staff members at A&M and district agriculture agents began their bimonthly staff conference here Monday. It will continue through Friday.

District agents exchange problems, new ideas and techniques, which they pass on to county agents in their home districts. They will also schedule agricultural specialists for their home districts.

Fourth Year Architects To Receive Design Awards

Awards of $150, $100 and $50 will go to three fourth-year architectural design students Monday for the best entries in a design contest sponsored by Fox & Jacobs building contractors.

The Dallas construction firm in cooperation with the Division of Architecture is sponsoring the awards to top off a design problem involving a modern multi-story apartment building for a site actually owned by the firm.

The five-week problem was a project for the entire 35-student architectural design class under the direction of Division of Architecture Assistant Professors William G. Wagner and Cecil W. Steward.

"We feel that having 'real clients' — people with an actual problem and actual site conditions — gives our students actual criticism about what the 'client' wants and prepares the students for what they will have to face when they graduate," said Steward.

Fox & Jacobs already has a finalized design for the apartment to be built on its Dallas site, but is sponsoring the problem mainly to attract design students to the housing development industry by "showing that there is a real place for design in the mass production of housing developments," Steward said.

36 DAYS THAT CHANGED THE PERFORMANCE PICTURE IN AMERICA

entered . . . a truly remarkable record considering that over 50% of all cars entered failed to finish.

Why do we keep such an interested eye on competitions such as these? Is speed important to us? Frankly, no. The speed capabilities of the leading American cars are now grouped so closely together that the differences have no real meaning. To us, who are building cars, success in this kind of competition means just one thing: the car is strong. This kind of performance capability means that the car is so well built that it can stand up to normal driving—the kind of day-in, day-out demands you put your own car through—for thousands of miles longer than less capable cars.

In tests like the Daytona 500 and Riverside, we find out in an afternoon what might take us 100,000 test-track miles to discover. We learn how to build superior strength into suspension systems, steering systems, drive train, body, tires. Anyone can build a fast car. What we're interested in is the concept of "total" performance.

We believe in this kind of total performance because the search for performance made the automobile the wonderfully efficient and pleasurable instrument it is today—and will make it better tomorrow.

Then, at Riverside in California, in America's only long-distance stock car event that is run on a road course (as opposed to closed circuit, banked tracks such as the track at Daytona), Dan Gurney pushed a Ford to first place.

The latest news comes north from Daytona. There in the open test that tears cars apart—the Daytona 500—Ford durability conquered the field. Fords swept the first 5 places . . . something no one else had equaled in the history of the event. In a competition—which anyone can enter—designed to prove how well a car hangs together, 9 Fords finished out of 12
