Study Tells Need For Low Tuition

(Special to The Battalion) WASHINGTON — The case for keeping tuition at a minimum at public colleges and universities has been bolstered by an analysis of family income made recently by Elmer D. West of the American Council on Education.

West gave his appraisal in a talk to the College Scholarship Service Meeting in New York City, as part of a review of the national scholarship situation.

According to the Census Bureau, the median U. S. family income in 1960 was $5,620, West said, indicating that half the families in the country had incomes below that figure.

"It is hard to see how families with such incomes can offer their children much hope of a college education," West declared. "Although a few individuals will aspire to and attain a college education, in general, hope — if it comes at all — must come largely from outside sources."

Looking Back...

At This Week

Dorms At Annex May Be Used

Two dormitories at the Research and Development Annex, formerly Bryan Air Force Base, may be used to house civilian students next year, The Battalion learned Monday from Bennie A. Zinn, director of the Department of Student Affairs.

Interested students have been filling out questionnaires this week, and an indication of how many students are interested will probably be announced next week. The questionnaires are not binding, but are being used simply to see how many students might be interested.

Should the dorms be used, students would pay $12 per month rent instead of the standard $20 because of the distance between the college and the annex.

Library Plans Security Checks

Sound Off

Editor, The Battalion:

Wednesday night I was very much impressed by the play "The Imaginary Invalid," which was presented by the Aggie Players. The acting and the production as a whole were excellent.

There has been a great deal of criticism concerning the lack of culture and art here. I was unhappy to notice the small number of people attending. Perhaps this feeling could be altered, if more people would support this group.

security checks to guard against loss of material, Library Director Robert A. Houze announced Monday.

Sharply increased library losses were given as justification for the planned checks, which will include all persons leaving either library.

The checks were to begin next Monday, but a delay has been caused by problems in working out details. The system should be in operation within several weeks.

Study-Week Plan With NASA Okayed

A study-work agreement with NASA's Manned Spacecraft Center in Houston was announced Wednesday by Assistant Dean of Engineering J. C. McGuire.

Under the plan selected engineering students here will alternate semesters of study with equal periods of work at the sprawling Houston installation.

The center presently needs 20 to 36 students for the program. The participants will be organized into pairs, with one in the classroom and the other working. At the end of a semester, they will change places.

Baseballers Take Conference Lead

The Aggie baseball team, one of the conference favorites, took over the league lead Tuesday by defeating Rice here, 5-3. Rice's loss, coupled with Baylor's upset of TCU, moved the Aggies into sole possession of the top spot.

The Aggies are 2-0, while both Rice and TCU stand at 2-1.

Johnny Crain and Bill Hancock paced the victors. Crain hurled nearly perfect ball for the last six innings, while Hancock pushed the Cadets into the lead to stay with a homer in the four-run second inning.

Red Powers' Two Threats Indicate Long Stalemate

By WILLIAM L. RYAN (Special Correspondent)

Soviet Premier Khrushchev's latest appeal to the Red Chinese included a clear threat to Peking: Cut out the monkey business or Moscow will have to get tough.

The swiftness of Peking's report, rejecting the appeal unless Chinese terms are met, suggested that the Mao Tze-tung regime is telling the Russians: "Go ahead and try it."

The Soviet Communist party's threat was tucked away toward the end of its wordy Pravda statement on the acrimonious dialogue between the two Communist party giants.

Khrushchev told the Chinese he had been patient and was willing to talk things over even now, if the "dogmatists" of the Communist world were willing to correct their mistakes.

But Pravda added, in a tone the Red Chinese could hardly mistake:

"If people continue to follow their erroneous line, insist on their mistakes and even aggravate them, and increasingly depart from Marxism-Leninism, it is imperative to continue and even step up the decisive struggle against them."

Only hours elapsed from the appearance of Pravda's long appeal for Communist unity and a statement broadcast by Peking, insisting that Moscow correct its own mistakes—such as condoning the "revisionism" of the Yugoslav Communists—before the Red Chinese will even consider a reconciliation.

Just how Khrushchev will carry out his threat to "step up the decisive struggle" against the Chinese is difficult to predict. The Soviet leader is in an awkward position.

Should the argument between Moscow and Peking be submitted to a world court of Communist leaders, as the Chinese proposed, Khrushchev could be pictured as demonstrably in the wrong. He is undoubtedly, as the Chinese claim, a deviator from Leninism.

Khrushchev's policies are based upon an opportunistic view of the world. When Communist theory gets in the way, he sets it aside.

In the case of Yugoslavia, Khrushchev only about a year ago still was reminding President Tito that he was off base in his revisions of a Communist theory.

Today Khrushchev is lambasting the Red Chinese for insisting that the Yugoslav party must remain where Stalin put it in 1948—outside the Communist family fold. Khrushchev claims now that all the world's Socialists—meaning Communists—are basically just one big family with similar aims, and that minor sins should be overlooked in the name of unity.
