

A Friend After Sundown

By CLOVIS McCALLISTER
Battalion Staff Writer

Anyone who has received a telegram or has ever had trouble getting into his room because of lacking a key, can thank Ted Cathey, the night manager of the Housing Office, for solving his problem.

Cathey has put in 16 years of service and is usually found in the Housing Office from 5 p.m. until midnight or later taking care of the many telephone calls and other services that the Housing Office renders at night.

Cathey said it would be impossible to do the things the Housing Office does during the evening hours without the seven boys employed to work delivering messages and assisting him with the phone and the other things that arise.

Occasionally amusing things arise such as people who call for information and before accepting it, they ask if the Housing Office will hold the phone while they go get a pencil to write the information down.

NASA Expert Due To Speak Tonight

The chief of the Computation and Data Reduction Division of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration will speak to the A&M student chapter of the Association for Computing Machinery in the Social Room of the Memorial Student Center Tuesday night at 7:30.

Eugene H. Brock, who received his master's degree here and is a former assistant dean of engineering, will show slides to the society and explain the role of computers in the Mercury space program.

Also Cathey relates the time an operator from California called and asked for a boy. Cathey told her he would send messenger to get the boy to a phone to accept the call and the operator said: "But, this is California calling" as if she did not have time for a messenger to go get the boy.

Cathey said the night personnel carry on some of the services the day shift carries on but it would be impossible to do them all. The night shift accepts calls and sends messengers for the person who receives the call, carries on Western Union services after the regular office closes, acts as dispatcher for the Campus Security officers, takes care of emergency problems dealing with utilities and a portion of the regular Housing Office work.

Observe Library Week

tunities to work with the Corps of Cadets and its leaders.

He has not been satisfied, however, with occupying just this one position. He is also the corresponding secretary for the A&M chapter of Eta Kappa Nu, chairman of a special committee of the Texas Delta chapter of Tau Beta Pi and an active member of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers. Even while accepting these many responsibilities, he has earned and maintained an outstanding grade point in his major, electrical engineering.

Jeff Harp has at heart the best interest of our one student body and will provide our campus with progressive and dedicated leadership.

government, but he is also our official representative to other schools and to the general public.

To the upholding of these responsibilities, I pledge myself, my office and my administration. I would appreciate your vote and your support in this election; but above all, fulfill your responsibility and exercise your voting privilege.

Editor,
The Battalion:

My name is Jay Jaynes and I am running for vice president of our student body. My reasons for desiring this office are many. I feel that there is a great need for a stronger alliance between the Corps and the civilian students. I think a revision of our Honor Code is a necessity in order to bring such an important theory into a reality.

I will be honest with you. I would like to be elected to this power position because of the policies I would like to initiate for the betterment of our school. Sure, I want your vote, but I am more interested in seeing you express your opinions by voting for the candidate of your choice.

Editor,
The Battalion:

This Wednesday each of you will have the opportunity to cast your vote for the representatives of your Student Senate. As a candidate for president of the student body, I am interested in promoting the interests of the students at A&M and increasing their role in the administration of our college. In only this way can the welfare of the student body be secured.

I feel that numerous improvements need to be made, and I am willing and eager to devote my time, efforts and interest in order to initiate such improvements, particularly in the area of student representation. This office carries tremendous responsibilities and is indeed one of the most important on the campus; for not only is the Student Senate president the head of student

Editor,
The Battalion:

My name is Pat Greene and I am a candidate for chairman of the student life committee. Some of you may remember that I was elected vice president of the Student Senate last year. I never received a chance to serve because I was disqualified for placing posters in the Academic Building.

Since I am a married student, I feel that I will have more time to devote to the job. I am running neither as a member of the Corps of Cadets nor as a civilian, but simply as a student of A&M. I believe my experience as president of the marketing society will help me in doing a better job. I will appreciate your support.

Clayton Named Visiting Prof At Hawaii U.

Dr. William Clayton, a professor in the Department of Oceanography and Meteorology, has accepted an appointment as a visiting professor at the University of Hawaii for one year, starting in September.

While teaching graduate students micro-meteorology, Clayton will continue his research work for the Air Force, Army and National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

One of his main research projects, for the Army Signal Corps, concerns weather forecast capabilities. Members of the department developed and turned over to the Army last year a computer which uses mathematical equations to predict future weather conditions. Now Clayton is working to improve the formulas.

The systems, called a low-level meteorological simulator, uses 44 equations solved at 12 levels, or a total of 528 equations in all. The simulator is actually a mathematical model of the first 3,000 feet of atmosphere above the earth's surface. By using electric analog processes, atmospheric processes are simulated.

Bi-City Coin Club Sponsors Exhibit For National Week

Bryan - College Station's Bi-City Coin Club is observing National Coin Week by sponsoring an exhibit in the Memorial Student Center.

Dr. Howard Joham, club president and plant sciences professor, said the display includes a wide variety of coins and paper money. Some of these are American type sets, rare coins, mint error coins and an 1801 large penny with three errors on it.
