Columnist Reviews Work, Calls It 'Lot Of Fun'

I've enjoyed writing this column. This is the last one before editor Alan Payne and I turn things over to the new staff. I have made a few people mad — insurance men, for example — and had a lot of fun doing it. Maybe I have accomplished several things in the process. Here is a review:

Feb. 7 — The Aggie Band shrugged off a legislative joke concerning a change in the state song from "Texas Our Texas" to "The Eyes of Texas." As it Barnhart said he couldn't remember the band ever playing the state song, so it really didn't matter. What's more, they didn't have the sheet music to "Texas Our Texas."

Feb. 14 — I cussed persistent, low-life insurance salesmen who pester students for a quick insurance bargain, often violating campus rules against soliciting.

The local life underwriters group invited me to dinner shortly thereafter and told me that they too were trying to curb the unethical efforts of a few insurance salesmen in this area. None of their group are violators, they assured me.

Feb. 21 — Short comment on a feature story by the Dallas Times Herald on an average Aggie fish, in which the hero transferred to
