Rolling Rattler Roundup

Miss Ethel Sperry of Tulsa captured a rattler during the annual Rattlesnake Roundup at Okeene, Okla., even though she's confined to a wheelchair by polio. Miss Sperry and a fellow employe, Juanita Moore, went hunting, not really expecting to catch anything. They found this 4-foot snake and Miss Sperry held it with a snake-catching tool while some men completed the capture. (AP Wirephoto)

Human Nutrition Values A Mystery

Much more research has been done in animal nutrition than in human nutrition, speakers from biochemistry and medical fields said here today.

Dr. William J. McGanity, Canadian-born doctor who is professor and chairman of the department of obstetrics for the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston, said that "we know a lot about animal nutrition but know right next to the square root of nothing regarding human requirements."

Dr. McGanity and James R. Couch of the Department of Biochemistry and Nutrition, spoke on minerals in the diet at the Wednesday session of the Human Nutrition Workshop in the Memorial Student Center. Thirty-six Texas county home demonstration agents — all graduates in home economics who have the responsibility of assisting homemakers, youth and other groups with nutrition information — are here for workshop, which ends Friday.

Fundamentals of minerals and the significance of minerals in diet were described by Dr. Couch a past chairman of the Texas Nutrition Conference, and the importance of calcium in bone human nutrition was explained by Dr. McGanity.

Miss Tompkins Quits Ag Post For New Job

Charlotte Tompkins, specialist in housing-home furnishings with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at College Station since 1956, will resign her position, effective May 31, to accept a post with the Cooperative Extension Service in Alaska.

Announcement of the resignation of Miss Tompkins was made today by Texas Agricultural Extension Service Director John E. Hutchison.

In her new assignment, Miss Tompkins will be assistant professor and district home demonstration agent for the Extension Service, with headquarters at Juneau. She will use a coordinated subject matter approach and will work with leaders and other citizens in the area of housing, home furnishings, foods and clothing.

Mrs. Florence W. Low, assistant director for home economics with the Extension Service, in commenting on Miss Tompkins' contributions to the Extension Service, said: "She has done an outstanding job in working with homemakers to develop programs based on their needs and interests. She has developed excellent result demonstrations with both home demonstration and 4-H Club members."

Miss Tompkins formerly taught home economics in the Wrangell Institute, a government school at Wrangell, an island and game preserve not far from Juneau. A native of Missouri, she was first employed by the Extension Service in 1943 as home demonstration agent in Hansford County. She resigned to go to Wrangell for one year, then returned to the extension service as county home demonstration agent in Carson County, a position she held until she joined the headquarters staff.
