Vet Student Honorees

AMONG THE PROFS

Smerdon Attends Seminar On South's Water Resources

Dr. Ernest T. Smerdon, professor in the Department of Agricultural Engineering, this week attended a two-day seminar at the University of Georgia in Athens, on water resources of the South. He was a member of the planning committee.

The seminar was sponsored by the Southern Regional Education Board and attracted leading scientists in water quality and preservation from nine Southern states.

Dr. Harrison E. Hierth, associate professor in the Department of English, will deliver the commencement address during graduation exercises Friday at Weimar High School.

Richard A. Kane, assistant professor in the Department of Physics, will participate in a five-week program of the National Science Foundation.

The solid state physics program is planned at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology from June 24-July 27.

Kane will continue research in the dislocation of crystal growth here the remainder of the summer.

Richard Batey has accepted an appointment as a National Science Foundation research participant at A&M. He will work this summer on the optical properties of crystalline filaments under the direction of Richard A. Kane of the Department of Physics.

The Journal of Applied Physics has accepted for publication a paper by Thomas E. Dixon and Richard A. Kane of the Department of Physics.

Titled "Growth of Manganous Oxide Whiskers," the paper is the first in a series on the growth and properties of new filamentary crystals.

Hugh J. Luke, assistant professor of English, has been elected by the University of Texas Chapter membership in Phi Kappa Phi. Phi Kappa Phi is a national honor society dedicated to unity and democracy of education. Membership is open to honor students from all departments of American universities and colleges.

Luke, who will receive his doctorate from the University of Texas in June, has resigned his position at A&M to become assistant professor of English at the University of Nebraska.

Scholarship Set For James Dominy

James Finley Dominy III of Abilene, freshman veterinary medicine major has been selected to receive the Danforth Summer Leadership Scholarship.

The award is for the American Youth Foundation Leadership Training Camp at Shelby, Mich., and is made to an outstanding student who will complete his first year in college and intends to major in veterinary medicine.

Dominy is a graduate of Wiley High School and has been designated a distinguished student. He is a member of Phi Eta Sigma, freshman honor society, and the Pre-Veterinary Society.

'BUSINESS BOOMING'

New Era Beginning For Horticulturists

Members of the 26th annual A&M Conference for Nurserymen and Landscape Horticulturists were urged here Monday to take advantage of a new era which is dawning in their business.

The appeal came from Dr. Joseph E. Howland, assistant to the president for O. M. Scott and Sons Company of Marysville, Ohio, a firm which deals in nursery and gardening supplies.

He explained to the estimated 85 persons attending the session that gardening interest is booming, and he offered several pointers which should help dealers benefit from the boom.

Howland suggested that the nurserymen and landscapers promise benefits that the customer wants and "that you can surely deliver." "Don't take much of the customer's time unless it can be exchanged for interesting and useful information," he said.

Howland asked that the dealer assure a customer's success by building it into the advice given. Check merchandise quality continuously and to high standards, he urged.

"Deliver more per dollar year by year and share the profit that comes with age," Howland continued.

The conference will be continued through noon Tuesday. Sponsors are A&M in co-operation with the Research and Education Committee of the Texas Association of Nurserymen.

Another program speaker, George McNew, Fort Worth management consultant, pointed out that a new market waiting to be exploited more fully is the landscaping of industrial and commercial buildings and grounds.

"There is a great need all around the country to develop and maintain the type of industrial landscaping which provides the right eye appeal," he said. "But of equal importance is developing such work so that there is the least possible maintenance expense."

McNew urged the conference members to keep records faithfully and accurately, and never let up on quality of products.

Architect Major To Represent U. S. At Barcelona Meet

An A&M architectural student has been chosen by a national organization as one of two delegates to an international conference next month in Barcelona, Spain. He is Noe R. Marmolejo, who is finishing his fourth year of studies in architecture.

Marmolejo was chosen as a delegate by the Association of Student Chapters of the American Institute of Architects. The other United States delegate is a Florida State University student.

The student will travel extensively in Europe after attending the Eighth International Conference of Architectural Students in Barcelona June 24-30. He will be the official delegate from A&M, as well as an official U. S. delegate.

Supreme Court Rules In Favor Of Sit-Ins

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled Monday that a state or city may not interfere, in any fashion, with peaceful racial integration sit-in demonstrations in public places of business.

But the multiple ruling did not clearly spell out the legal position of the individual shopkeeper who may wish to restrict his clientele without the support of segregation laws.

The tribunal not only struck down laws and ordinances against peaceful sit-in demonstrations, but barred action or statements by officials that might influence shopkeepers to turn away Negro customers.

It was a decision with more far-reaching impact on racial relations in daily life than any since the school desegregation decrees of nearly a decade ago.

This new historic ruling was laid down in seven cases, mostly centered on arrest during the 1960 campaign to integrate lunch counters and other business in the South. Involved were cases from Alabama, Louisiana, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Maryland.

These appeals involved 44 individuals but about 3,000 other demonstrators adjudged guilty in similar cases long have been looking to the Supreme Court for word that might free them of these convictions.

Sen. John Tower Slated For Award

United States Senator John Tower of Texas will be given the Americans for Constitutional Action Second Biennial Distinguished Service Award at a reception given in his honor by ACA's national Board of Trustees.

The organization's Board includes such distinguished Americans as former President Herbert Hoover, Edgar Eisenhower, Admiral Ben Moreell, former Navy Secretary Charles Edison, and other outstanding civic and professional leaders.

The reception, to be held in the Nation's Capital, is expected to attract more than 400 people, among which are 150 leading United States Senators and Representatives; former members of Congress and nationally known civic, professional and business figures.
