Students Picked For Co-op Plan

Eight Texas A&M College engineering students have been nominated for a cooperative, work-study program with the Manned Spacecraft Center in Houston.

Additional students will be inducted shortly, assistant dean engineering J. G. McGuire said Tuesday. He is awaiting results of the Civil Service examination required of all candidates for the program which is effective in September.

"There are still places open particularly for mechanical and engineering students," according to McGuire, coordinator of the cooperative program which is open to mechanical and electrical engineering students. Interested students should contact the office of the Dean of the School of Engineering.

The program eventually is expected to involve from 20 to 30 students.

Each semester, half of the students will be working at the Manned Spacecraft Center and the other half will be studying at A&M. At the end of the semester, they will swap places.

"We also are getting some inquiries from other industry for this type of cooperative program," McGuire said.
