COMPETITION IN 28 EVENTS

4-H Clubs Slate Roundup For 2,000 Participants

Roundup time in Texas, 4-H members, leaders, county extension agents and friends of 4-H assemble for their annual round-up. The big day will be Wednesday, when winners will be named in 28 judging and team demonstration contests. Training for the state contests has been underway for many weeks and those participating in the contests have already won county and district honors. To be eligible to participate in the state finals, the team or individual must have ranked first or second in the district eliminations. MORE THAN 1,300 individual 4-H Club members will participate in the state finals and many will be shooting for an opportunity to represent their state in national finals later in the year. Four 4-H Club members have been coming to A&M for more than half a century. Their annual visit predates the 4-H emblem and passage of the legislation by the Federal Government in 1914 which established the Cooperative Agricultural Extension Service. Four 4-M Club work is conducted in the counties under the supervision of the county extension agents with assistance from local voluntary leaders and friends of 4-H.

ing contributions to 4-H will be extended by the Texas 4-H Youth Development Foundation to individuals and business concerns in the state. The Foundation will also sponsor the ever popular "chuck wagon barbecue" on the evening of June 4. The first general assembly of Roundup will follow the barbecue. Winners in the 28 different judging and team demonstration contests will be announced during Wednesday afternoon and will be honored at the final banquet in the evening. The Roundup will be officially over with breakfast on Thursday. Newspapers are sponsoring delegates from their cities by offering expense scholarships for both students and teachers. "Most of these scholarships are for $50, and will pay all necessary expenses except transportation," McGuire said. The Newspaper Fund of the Wall Street Journal has made a grant to the workshop again this year to defray part of the instructional costs. MANY OF THE delegates are being sent by funds made by press clubs and other high school organizations, McGuire pointed out. This summer's workshop will offer beginning and advanced instruction in the school newspaper, yearbook and photography. Students will register July 14 and graduate the following Friday.

Annual Workshop To Convene Here July 14-19

Recent developments in many aspects of education will be covered in conferences June 10-12 on campus. Approximately 500 school superintendents and administrators and instructional supervisors are expected to attend. Among the 20 discussion leaders are several superintendents of major and small school districts of Texas. Victoria Supt. C. O. Chandler, president of the Texas State Teachers Association, will lead a discussion of "School Law—New Legislation." OTHER TOPICS include new mathematics and science programs, adult education, programmed instruction, programs for the academically gifted students, school finance and professional growth. Speakers for the general assemblies will be Texas Attorney General Waggoner Carr and Boulder, Colo., Supt. Natt B. Burbank. Burbank is president of the American Association of School Administrators. The meetings will include the thirty-eight annual Texas Association of County Superintendents Association Conference, and the thirtieth annual Texas Association of Instructional Supervisors Conference. THE DISCUSSION leaders and
