A&M Committee Releases Teacher Education Bulletin

A new 45-page bulletin has been prepared by the A&M Council on Teacher Education to outline the college-wide scope of teacher education programs. The booklet gives details of accredited programs leading to provisional certificates in 16 teaching fields, professional certificates in 11 teaching fields and seven areas of administration and special services. Dr. Chris H. Groneman is chairman of the Council on Teacher Education.

A&M has 39 faculty members in teacher education departments, and in 1961 produced 5.5 percent of the male teacher education graduates in Texas at the bachelor degree level. Only two other institutions exceeded this figure. "At the national level, the 68 land-grant institutions in 1959 graduated 20 percent of the bachelor's degrees in education, 30 percent of the master's degrees in education and 70 percent of the doctoral degrees in education," the bulletin states.

AMONG THE PROFS

Utah Sociologist On Leave Here

Dr. John Rees Christiansen, associate professor of sociology at Utah's Brigham Young University, is spending a year's sabbatical leave at A&M as a teacher and researcher.

He replaces Dr. Bardin Nelson, professor in the A&M Department of Agricultural Economics* and Sociology, who is on leave in Syria. Christiansen, widely known in the sociological world, has written numerous journal articles, bulletins, and has contributed to sociological textbooks.

The professor was born in Utah and received BS and MS degrees in sociology in 1949 and 1952 at Utah State University. His doctorate came in 1955 at the University of Wisconsin.

Dr. Paul R. Hensarling of A&M is on the program of two professional education meetings held this week. He heads the Department of Education and Psychology. Hensarling will be chairman of a panel at the School Business Services Workshop to be held Thursday and Friday at Texas Technological College, Lubbock.

Dr. J. R. Couch, Department of Poultry Science, and Dr. W. C. Ellis, Department of Animal Husbandry, will attend and present papers on their research work at the Sixth International Congress on Nutrition, Edinburgh, Scotland, August 8-15. Both will also spend time before the Congress visiting and conferring with scientists in their respective fields.

Couch, prior to the Congress, will confer with staff members of the University of Reading, Reading, England, and the University of Nottingham, Nottingham, England. He will also participate in the discussion of papers presented at the Congress and confer with biochemists and nutritionists on research projects and problems.

Ellis will visit research centers in France, United Kingdom, Netherlands, Germany, Denmark, Finland, and Scotland prior to the Congress. After the Congress he will visit other centers in Scotland and the United Kingdom and the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Dairy Research Center, Beltsville, Maryland. Dr. Ellis specializes in animal ruminant nutrition research at A&M.

Dr. Alden P. Scott of Metairie, La., who received his Doctor of Veterinary Medicine degree in May at A&M, has joined the school's Department of Veterinary Medicine and Surgery.

He will serve as instructor and clinician in the Small Animal Clinic.

Before coming to A&M to complete requirements for a DVM degree, Scott was graduated in 1958 with a BS degree from Southeastern Louisiana College.

Two Hawaiian Boy Scouts Will Help Plant Scientists

Two Hawaiian Boy Scouts, have volunteered a helping hand to two A&M scientists studying the chemical composition of nucleic acids of cultivated and wild species of cotton.

The Scouts have consented to gather tomentosum seed for the scientists as a community project with no expense. They ask in return the purpose of the scientists' work, so that they may better understand why the seed is being collected.

According to Dr. David W. Rosenberg, head of the Department of Plant Sciences, the scientists need about 2 pounds of seed from a wild species of cotton, G. tomentosum, which is found only in Hawaii. The scientists wrote George M. Yamane, superintendent, Experimental Department, Dole Corporation, Lanai

City, Hawaii, for information on the feasibility of obtaining much seed.

Collecting the seed is not easy since the scattered plants are wild, mixed in with other vegetation, and produce small seed, relatively small amounts.

Yamane, through Hiroo Ogasawara, Boy Scout district chairman, contacted the youths who will help
