

Moving Library Collection

Students work at moving 100,000 volumes from the Texas Engineering Library to temporary quarters in Bagley Hall as a preliminary step toward construction of new library facilities. They are, left to right, Aggie Ronnie Haag, Elroy Young and Don Barrier, and high school student Pete Tucker.

STEP TOWARD NEW FACILITIES

Engineering Library Books Transferred To Bagley Hall

Moving 100,000 volumes as a preliminary step toward construction of new library facilities at A&M is expected to be completed within two weeks.

Being moved is the Texas Engineers Library Collection.

Books may be checked out during the moving period.

"The purpose of the move," A&M Librarian Robert A. Houze said, "is to vacate temporarily the Texas Engineers Library Building, so that the new library building construction can be started early in the fall. The new building will extend from the rear of Cushing Memorial Library to enclose three sides and the top of the engineer library building."

A CREW OF 12 students is working long hours including weekends to complete the transfer to the ground floor of Bagley Hall on the north side of Cushing Library. Houze said the first floor of Bagley Hall will be used for the Texas Engineer Library. The second floor will continue to be used generally for classrooms and offices.

Plans for the $1,500,000 library expansion program with completion in 1935 as the goal were announced earlier by President Earl Rudder. The expansion will more than double space available for library service.

Moving the Texas Engineers Library Collection is more difficult than moving into a new building, Houze said. He explained that books must be removed from the stacks or metal shelving, the shelves must be taken apart and moved to Bagley Hall and reassembled, and then the books carted to the new quarters.

"Certain services of the Texas Engineers Library will be transferred to Cushing until the building program is completed," Houze said.

The atomic energy collection and documents of other governmental agencies engaged in research and development work will be available in the Sciences Periodical Reading Room on the third floor of Cushing Library.

DETAILED AND exhaustive searches of technical literature also will be handled at the main library.

"The Texas Engineers Library itself will retain in addition to a general circulation service the general reference, map and interlibrary loan services," the librarian said.

There will be air-conditioning for the most-used portions of the new quarters in Bagley Hall. Houze said air-conditioning is made possible through the A&M System office of Physical Plant.

The library entrance will be on the Cushing Library side of Bagley Hall. The entrance for the second floor stairway is on the parking lot side of the building.
