Two Military Science Men Promoted At Summer Camp

Two Army officers of the Reserve Officer Training Corps staff at A&M have received promotions recently.

It now is Lt. Col. Frank S. Hertzog and Maj. John R. Vilas.

The colonel has been at A&M since 1962 and holds the B.S. degree from Colorado State and the M.B.A. degree from the University of Denver.

Major Vilas graduated from Texas A&M in 1953 and returned to the campus in 1962 as a member of the ROTC staff.

Space Administration and the National Science Foundation sponsor the conference at the Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

This is the third year that Moyer has been invited to the Blacksburg conferences. Other A&M professors also have attended earlier conferences.

The appointment of John F. Carson of El Paso as an instructor in the Department of English at A&M has been announced by Dr. John Q. Anderson, department head.

Carson will coach the A&M Debate Team in addition to classroom duties, Anderson said.

The new A&M faculty member comes here Sept. 1 from a faculty position at Texas Western College. He holds both B.A. and M.A. degrees from Texas Western.

Dr. Michael J. Francis has joined the A&M Department of History and Government as an instructor in government, Dr. J. M. Nance, department head, announced.

Francis received the doctorate at the University of Virginia, where he wrote his doctoral dissertation on "United States Government Attitudes Toward Collective Security Arrangements with Latin America Since World War II." In his advanced studies, he spent the summer of 1960 at the National University of Mexico.

20 Schoolmen Are Attending Management, Finance Course

Twenty students including superintendents and teachers from a wide area are at A&M for a special workshop in the growing field of school finance and business management.

Teaching the three-week workshop as a visiting professor is Frank D. Austin of Amarillo. He is a veteran of nearly 20 years service as school business manager and past president of two state professional associations. He has taught in summer sessions in various colleges and universities.

The workshop which continues through Friday is designed to assist superintendents and business managers and to help others prepare to assume the business of school district officials.

Austin said "the business duties in the schools have multiplied manifold in recent years."

"Even many of the medium-size school districts now have business managers," he noted.

School business managers "more and more" relieve superintendents of many of the business aspects of district operations, so the superintendent may devote more time to curriculum and instruction matters, Austin said.

"We are studying specific problems, as they relate to the business operations of public schools," he continued.

Oceanographer And Family Leave Aug. 16 For Britain

Dr. Donald W. Hood, A&M oceanographer, and his family plan to leave Aug. 16 for a year's residence in England.

Hood as a chemical oceanographer will be doing research with Professor W. David Evans, head of the Department of Geology of the University of Nottingham.

The A&M faculty member is among approximately 100 American scientists who hold National Science Foundation senior postdoctoral fellowships for 1963-64.

A SECOND member of the A&M Department of Oceanography and Meteorology also plans to go to the University of Nottingham to work with Evans and Hood.

Researcher Lela Mae Jeffrey, a chemical oceanography researcher, will transfer her NSF-sponsored research of organic matter in sea water. She plans to leave early in September and will be gone for about a year.

Miss Jeffrey's research concerns identification of organic matter found in sea water.

The researchers plan to study the influence of organic matter on the processes by which sediment is consolidated into rock.

"I believe that our work at Nottingham will open up new horizons for work in areas of interdisciplinary nature that are important in understanding earth processes," Hood said.

HE RECENTLY received the Faculty Distinguished Achievement Award in recognition of his research activities in addition to his teaching.

The A&M professor received the Ph.D. degree here. Earlier, he completed undergraduate studies at Pennsylvania State College and received the M.S. degree from Oklahoma State University.

Dr. and Mrs. Hood and their daughters, Becky, age 9, Barbie, 8, and Susie, 4, will sail from New York City aboard the SS America Aug. 24.

The Hood family will tour briefly in England before going to Nottingham to begin residence at a bungalow on the edge of the University of Nottingham campus.

MISS JEFFREY, a native Texan, has been a researcher on the A&M campus for almost a decade. She first came here in 1951. She also has served as a research assistant at other institutions including the Scripps Institute of Oceanography.

Her major research effort presently is financed by a two-year, $40,000 grant from the National Science Foundation.

"The ultimate purpose of this research," she said, "is to devise an analytic scheme for identifying the major organic compounds in large samples of sea water."

Hood is consultant and associate investigator for this project.
