

TTI Expects Same 'Average' Driver

Texans will be permitted to travel at 70 miles per hour Friday—legally that is—as a new state speed law becomes effective.

The law will up the maximum daytime speed to 70 as opposed to 60. Night drivers will be held to 65 mph.

A&M officials schooled in traffic problems don't expect any immediate change in the pace of the "average" motorist, however.

THE MAIN REASON is many people are already exceeding the posted 60 mph limits. Studies show roadway conditions have more influence on the traffic pace.

"The new speed law will legalize speeds many drivers have already adopted," Neilon J. Rowan of the Texas Transportation Institute, said. "Some other states also have the 70 mph law."

An earlier study by Rowan and

Charles J. Keese, TTI's executive officer, revealed 24 to 49 per cent of the drivers at four East Texas locations exceeded speed limits even under radar enforcement.

The presence of radar units, in fact, caused only a temporary effect on the motorist's speed. Although radar may have a long range effect on speed, the localized influence did not extend beyond four miles on either side of the radar station.

RESEARCH SHOWED traffic responds to changing conditions on the roadways and surrounding areas. Curves, residential and industrial development, road intersections and limited view were among the greatest factors causing reduced speeds.

Texas automobiles and highways are, for the most part, designed for greater speed, William R. Mc-Casland, a TTI research engineer pointed out. How safe our roads will be in the future will depend upon drivers.

Rowan mentioned that speed is often the "whipping post" for automobile accidents and added: "Seldom is one single factor the reason for an accident; the real cause is a complexity of factors, of which driver error is primary."

Tigerette Officers

AT SHORT COURSE

Champion Cowgirl Rides Here Friday

World's champion barrel racer and all-around cow-girl will demonstrate her skills during A&M's third annual Horse Short Course Friday and Saturday.

She's Jane Mayo of Okemah, Okla.

The horsewoman will show the fine points of barrel racing and judging in a 1:30-5 p.m. session Friday.

DEMONSTRATIONS during the same period also will be given on western pleasure riding, reining, roping, and cutting by Bob Gray of Cypress, editor of the "Texas and Southwestern Horseman" magazine; Matlock Rose of Seagoville, professional horse trainer; L. N. Shies of Sherman, professional horse trainer; and George Tyler of Gainesville, Quarterhorse breeder.

Miss Mayo has been straddling horses since she was 3 years old. At 18 she was roving calves and began barrel racing at 13. By 18, she was contesting professionally.

Her championship titles are world's champion junior optional roper, 1954; American Junior Rodeo Association champion member, 1955; world's champion team roper, 1957 and 1958; fourth in national bareback bronc riding, 1958; runner-up world's champion calf roper, 1959; world's champion barrel racer, 1959; world's champion all-around cowgirl, 1959; world's champion barrel racer, 1960 and 1961.

MISS MAYO is now conducting a school and clinic of barrel racing, calf roping and cutting horse handling at Okemah.

A featured speaker for the short course will be a nationally known horseman and veterinarian.

He is Dr. Wayne O. Kester, retired brigadier general for the U. S. Air Force Veterinary Corps and now director of professional education for the Morris Animal Foundation at Denver, Colo.

His talk, "Recent Findings and Needs in Equine Research," will be heard at 4 p.m. the first day of the course.

A graduate of Kansas State University, General Kester served in the Veterinary Corps from 1933 through 1957. He was director of the unit from 1949 to 1957.

HE IS A PAST president of the American Veterinary Medical Association and the American Association of Equine Practitioners. He is a Fellow in the American College of Laboratory Animal Medicine and a member of the American Board of Veterinary Public Health.

The conference is sponsored by the A&M Animal Husbandry Department and School of Veterinary Medicine. It will be held in conjunction with the State 4-H Show Thursday through Saturday.
