Rudder's ROTC Stand Should Be Reassuring

Members of the Corps of Cadets and everyone else interested in A&M should be reassured by recent remarks of University President Earl Rudder while acting in his capacity as Commanding General of the 90th Infantry Division.

Rudder told the members of the Texas Capital Area Chapter of the Association of the United States Army at their September meeting that the Reserve Officers Training Program is the greatest single tool with which colleges and universities have to produce a whole man.

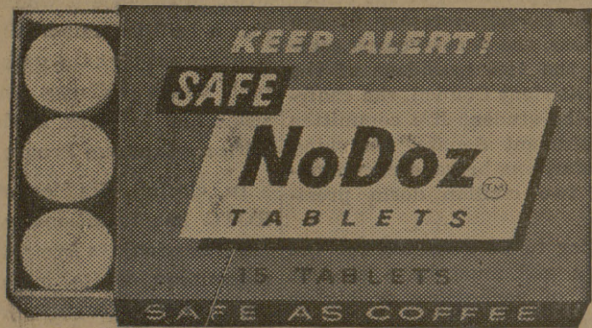

Advocates of the Corps should appreciate the fact that Rudder was speaking before a group which probably had a number of "up through the ranks" officers in it. For him to tell men, many who are veterans of World War II and Korea, that the ROTC furnishes men "with that old fashioned gumption," should indicate for most people the confidence he has in the Corps of Cadets.

The stand taken by Rudder coincides with his recent efforts to strengthen the A&M Corps of Cadets by bringing about a reorganization in the University's military organization.

Student Criticism Of Profs Studied

BOULDER, Colo. (IP) — The Faculty Senate at the University of Colorado adopted as submitted the report of the ad hoc committee to consider "the degree to which students may criticize publicly members of a university faculty and administration without disciplinary action by the University."

The committee, which included five faculty members and two student government representatives, agreed that disciplinary action "would be called for only under the rarest of circumstances." The committee said it "recognizes that 'guidelines' can consist only in the general principle to which we appeal."

The text of the committee's statement follows: "The University should encourage and stimulate independent thinking on the part of its students in every way possible. Likewise, it should encourage dissent, and freedom of opinion, and criticism of all ideas, policies, and programs of the University and of society. It should also encourage students to be critical of the quality of teaching to which they are exposed."

"However, it should be recognized that all such freedoms carry with them an obligation to use them wisely and prudently and in the best traditions of fair play and justice; with due consideration and respect for the rights and feelings of others; and with a view to the ultimate effects upon the University of which they are a part."

"The University, since it is a corporate society having specific and unique aims, purposes, and objectives, has the right and the duty to expect of all its faculty, staff and students, a reasoned and careful balance of their freedoms and responsibilities. In extreme cases the University, through appropriate channels,

Higher Standards Sought At Dayton

DAYTON, Ohio — The University of Dayton will strengthen its academic standards while at the same time providing an adjustment period for new freshmen.

This is the gist of a new schedule on academic standing requirements announced by University Dean Father Thomas A. Stanley. It goes into effect along with a new "Split Third-Term" calendar with the opening of the 1963-64 academic year.

Under the new system, a freshman must maintain a 1.7 average (based on a 4.0 system); sophomores 1.8 in the first semester, and 1.9 in the second; and juniors, seniors and graduate students 2.0. The lower requirement for new freshmen is designed to help them through the period of adjustment common to new college students, Father Stanley explained.

If a student falls below the required average, he must in the next semester earn not just a 2.2, but a high enough average to accumulate the next semester's required average. Thus, the lower an average falls, the more increasingly difficult it becomes in succeeding semesters to maintain in good standing.

Another aspect of the new ruling is that a student will now be allowed only one probationary period in a school or college of the University. Previously, two such probationary periods were allowed.

Also tied into the new system is a restricted academic and extra-curricular program for students on probation.
