

'University' Brings Changes

School Adjusts To Its New Name

By DAVID RIDEOUT
Special Writer

Here at Aggieland, the old "college" has been dropping away right and left and is being quickly replaced by the more distinguished title of "university." Although a few of these changes are major operations, the majority are relatively minor.

New aluminum letters have supplemented the old letters in the recent change of the name on the monuments at East Gate from "A&M College of Texas" to "Texas A&M University." Costs were defrayed by making use of the old letters in the new name.

The matter of changing the letters on the smoketack has been discussed, but no definite plans have been made as yet. Nothing will be done to the old landmark until demolition of its sister stack is completed and a low, modern smoke stack and will probably have the letters are sunken in the smoketack and will probably have to be filled in with concrete and then reworked.

"THE COLLEGE seal enlaid in the floor inside the entrance of both the System Administration and Richard Coke Building will not be changed. There is too much historical and sentimental value involved to permit a change," Tom D. Cherry, director of business affairs.

After studying several designs submitted by artists, the executive committee chose a new seal and a letterhead which is now in use on all university stationery.

A new inscription will be printed on the water tower sometime this winter. This will very likely be done during the Christmas holidays when there will be less demand for the water. The tower will be drained and then receive fresh coats of paint inside and out.

"Texas A&M University" will be painted on two sides.

SAMPLE DECALS are presently being tested by the Department of Building and Utilities. Upon selection of a serviceable decal, the doors of B. & U. vehicles, and official cars of the university will receive new decals which will have the university title.

Cherry noted that the overall cost of making these changes has not amounted to much.

"We are changing things, for the most part, as we would have normally done in the course of making the usual repairs," said Cherry.

"We have had no loss in merchandise due to the name change," said Carl Birdwell, Exchange Store manager. "Everything concerning the change has been very smooth."

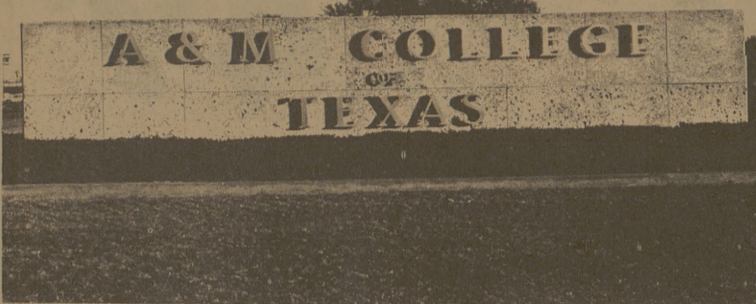

Due to the name change coming late in the year, shoulder patches and collar brass for the Corps were not changed for this school year. The change to "AMU" will probably be made by next fall.

"ALL NEW merchandise we are now receiving has the new seal and university title, however, there is a possibility that former students will still prefer articles with A&M College of Texas inscribed upon them.

"If this is so, we will meet the demand."

Sentimentalists now ordering their class rings can still have "college" inscribed on them, although "university" is now available for those that prefer the newer name.

In addition to the usual problems associated with a name change of a large institution, some people still seem to be confused as whether or not to put periods after the "A" and "M" in the new name. To clarify the matter, there should be no periods for "A&M" stands for nothing.

Kyle Field Seating Revealed

There are 7,500 seats reserved for students in Kyle Field this year, said Pat Nance, chairman of the Student Life Committee. These seats extend from the 50 yard line to the north end zone, and Nance said students are expected to sit in their class sections.

Corps seniors will stand in sections 132, 131 and 130; juniors in sections 129 and 128; sophomores in sections 127 and 126; and freshmen in sections 125 and 124. Civilian students will stand above the Corps in their classes.

No one will be admitted to the student section without his activity card or a date ticket.

Civilian students will be admitted to their respective sections by showing the Kyle Field seating card they received at registration.

In order to avoid the confusion of cadets meeting their classmates inside the stadium, Nance said that seniors enter through ramp Q and P; juniors enter through ramp O; sophomores enter through ramp N; and freshmen enter through ramp M.
