

System Men Leaving Soon For Tunisian Assignment

Three new members of the A&M University System party to Tunisia leave shortly for assignments at the Chott Maria Agricultural College in the North African nation.

A&M cooperates in the three-year effort to establish the agricultural school patterned after the American land-grant colleges. The governments of Tunisia and the United States sponsor the program.

The Chott Maria Agricultural College opened this month with 80 students. Among them are 20 second-year students who had attended classes on another Tunisian college campus.

The trio to assume new duties in Tunisia Oct. 20 will join two other A&M men. Two others will leave later this year and it is hoped to fill three more positions in 1964, Henry Ross of the A&M International Programs Office, said. Ross is a veteran agricultural educator and coordinator of the Tunisian program for A&M.

Scheduled to leave the campus later this week are Major C. Quinn, a language instructor here since 1960, Allison J. Abshire and Bruno Quebedeaux Jr., who has worked on the Louisiana State University horticultural farm since graduating earlier this year.

"Each of these men has a special role and without him the program will fail to function," Ross said.

Well Known English Prof To Talk Here

A nationally-known professor of English, Robert E. Spiller of the University of Pennsylvania will speak at an American Studies Association of Texas meeting Dec. 7 on the A&M University campus.

Professor Spiller will be the luncheon speaker, professor of English John Q. Anderson announced. Dr. Anderson heads the department of English and is vice president and program chairman of the state association.

Nine papers by professors from nine state colleges and universities in Texas in the fields of economics, English, government, philosophy and social science will be presented at the meeting.

Professor Spiller's topic will be "Attitudes Toward International Cultural Relations."

Theme of the meeting will be "The American Identity: The Development of Domestic and Foreign Concepts of American National Character."

Members of the local committee include Dr. J. M. Nance, chairman; Dr. John Q. Hays, Dr. Carroll D. Laverty and Dr. H. E. Hierth.

Quinn will conduct English courses for students at the new agricultural college. A native of Navasota, Quinn holds B.A. and M.A. degrees from Stanford. He is a veteran instructor in languages.

Quinn will visit the Foreign Service Institute's language facilities in Washington enroute to Tunisia. A complete modern languages laboratory will be established at the new school under Quinn's direction.

Abshire and Quebedeaux are scheduled to leave here late this week and will fly from Baton Rouge Oct. 17.

Junior Conference Scheduled To Start Here On Monday

Leaders from various Texas college and university campuses will appear on the program of the twentieth annual Junior College Conference Monday at A&M University. The conference serves as an important link between junior and senior colleges and universities and almost every campus in the state will be represented.

Approximately 100 persons are expected to attend, Assistant Dean of Engineering C. H. Ransdell said. He has served 10 years as conference chairman.

Conference registration begins at 8 a.m. Monday and the program ends with a dinner session Monday night.

An address, a paper and a report are scheduled during the morning. Dean of Arts and Sciences Frank W. R. Hubert will speak, Dr. David G. Hunt of the Texas State Department of Education will present the paper, and Dean Gaston Gooch of Navarro College will give the report.

Professor Claude Owen of Kilgore College will speak during the afternoon.

A panel session on "Transfer of Junior College Credits to Senior Colleges and Universities" will be held in the afternoon. Panel members include Dr. Grady Sinclair of Del Mar College, Dr. S. M. Kennedy of Texas Technological College and Elwood J. Price of the University of Texas.

Former Students Named To Offices

Two former A&M University students have been named president and vice president of the Houston Chapter of the American Institute of Architects.

Wallie E. Scott, Jr., '43 was elected president, and the new vice president is Preston Bolton of P. M. Bolton & Associates. He is a 1941 architecture graduate.

Abshire will serve as agricultural extension education specialist, working closely with Tunisian farmers in the vicinity of the college. He holds a master's degree from LSU in agricultural extension education and also is a graduate of the University of South-west Louisiana.

Quebedeaux will conduct simple applied horticultural research and teach. He completed undergraduate studies at LSU in 1962 and this year received the master's degree.

Head of the A&M party in Tunisia is Dr. Randall Stelly, associate professor of agricultural economics and a veteran of overseas service. He and Arlan B. McSwain, a 1950 graduate of A&M and an irrigation specialist, went to Tunisia this year.

FIFTEEN POUNDS A MINUTE A&M chefs witness demonstration of new machine.

Vegetable Machine Demonstrated Here

A machine that does figuratively everything with vegetables except cook and set them on the table, was demonstrated Tuesday for university dining hall chefs.

List price of the machine is $800, Nugent said.

Both Duncan and Sbsia Hall kitchens are being equipped with the Qualheim electro-cut vegetable cutter and slicer machines in the modernization of campus kitchen equipment, Frank F. Nugent, director of food service, said.

One man can use a machine to slice all of the french fries for a dining hall or to prepare all of the lettuce, Nugent said.

The machine measures less than 38-inches in any dimension and weighs 152 pounds. Its capacity in 60 seconds is to cut or slice 12 pounds of french fries, 20 pounds of soup stocks, 15 pounds of cabbage slaw and similar amounts of other vegetables.

United Nations Club Meets Friday

The organizational meeting of the A&M United Nations Club will be held at 7:30 p.m. Friday at the YMCA Building. Membership is open to all interested persons in this area.

The election of officers is scheduled and refreshments will be served, Club President Sam U Kim announced. He is a Korean and served last year as club president.

The club joins foreign students on the campus with other foreign persons of this area.
