BATTALION EDITORIALS

Time Has Finally Come

Man, it's finally time. It's time for a home game and those sweet young things.

With four weeks of class behind us, the weekend of football and dates will be a relief for many of us. It also gives some students their first opportunity to take a first-hand look at the Aggie football team for this year.

Of course, we should remember that the football team and thousands of Aggie fans will be getting a first look at the Corps of Cadets, civilian students and their wives and dates. We are confident that the Corps will present itself as the fine marching unit it always is, and that the civilians will be just as impressive.

However, we all should remember that the football team will not have much time for looking around. The only way they can be impressed by any of us is by the noise we make when we yell. We can let the team, former students, other Aggie fans and most important, ourselves, know that The Spirit is really alive on the A&M campus. We are confident that it is, and that our confidence will be justified this weekend.

Editor, The Battalion:

As a loyal and dedicated A&M former student I feel it necessary to take exception to Bob Rowland's letter in the Oct. 4 Battalion.

Mr. Rowland is so far off base his letter hardly merits an answer, however, since there is a wild possibility that both students and faculty might be misled by such allegations and unfounded statements an answer is appropriate.

As graduate of the Class of '41, letterman in three sports; and since graduation, an officer of the Aggie Club, past president of the Quarterback Club, former member of the coaching staff, and above all, a dedicated and contributing A&M former student, I feel qualified to speak.

First, the great majority of the Aggie former students over the world shall continue to support A&M in the future as they have in the past, and I shall continue to do so.

This shall be. For all honest to goodness, true A&M men are endowed with that certain something you cannot beg, borrow or steal, and gain only by being an A&M Man. All of us are privileged to have this unique quality, that A&M and only A&M can give.

Secondly, our loyalty is much, much deeper than co-education, intergration or any other changes that the administration or board might feel necessary to further the advancement of our great university.

President Earl Rudder and his administration team and staff are doing an excellent job and the former students have the greatest confidence in their leadership.

Above all else, Mr. Rowland, I shall oppose the legislature, or any other minority group attempting to dictate to the Board of Directors on the co-education issue or any other issue involving policy matters relating to our school, and will stump the state if necessary to prevent such an occurrence.

It is beyond me to try and figure out who Mr. Rowland thinks he is representing in such a letter. Certainly he is not speaking for me and the vast majority of other Aggies throughout the state and nation.

Congratulations, Mr. Editor, on your editorial in the same Oct. 4 issue.

Editor, The Battalion:

On behalf of the "two percenters" I object to being grouped with Aggies that lack school spirit and those who object to any once-established rule or tradition or who are "disgusted" with anyone who does object to anything.

It has been us two percenters that have always brought about reforms and almost any other change you can mention. But once the change has been made we proceed onward looking for new and brighter fields to conquer.

As for the football team, we have always criticized it to the effect that many bashful Aggies have been forced to show their spirit. This negative support has worked in the past to raise lagging spirits but we will not tolerate indiscriminate criticism of our team or defeatism.

We argued for and against the name change and the admission of women until positive action was taken. Some of the 98 percenters are still fighting this civil war.

There are many more worthy causes to champion: Should we all be required to wear cowboy hats at the dinner table? Should Kyle Field be turned back into a cow pasture? Will a fully equipped school bring about a better football team? Should we tear down classrooms and install parking lots?

There are a multitude of dragons to slay and other worlds to conquer. We, the two percenters, stand united for and against all worthy and important issues to guide the lost 98 percent particularly our infallible leaders, to greater heights.
