Fate Of Yell Practice
Might Be Decided Friday

The final midnight yell practice? This could very conceivably happen Friday night as student leaders once again try to head off possible trouble from the drunken disorderly persons who have made such shambles of the last several midnight yell practices.

The conduct of too many students at the last yell practice was a disgrace to the entire student body at Texas A&M University, and surely added fuel to the fire for those who believe A&M students to be "unrefined." But the actions of those few were not spontaneous.

Midnight yell practice has degenerated for the past several years from a very fine, and certainly unique feature of a school whose spirit is known the world over, to a drunken, semi-organized riot.

Head Yell Leader Mike Marlow has warned students that anyone caught with toilet paper Friday night will appear before the Senior Court. It might be well to add to the list those "who couldn't get a date so they showed up drunk." There is a time and place for liquor and toilet paper, and neither belong at midnight yell practice.

We suggest that those who have a sincere desire to support the team and try to preserve one more tradition, go to the yell practice Friday night. Those who want to get drunk can find a less crowded place to drink.

Editor,
The Battalion:
We would like to salute those A&M men of the Class of '64, namely Bob Barsch, Bell Evans, Charlie Lead, Joe Truett and Roger Trienann who took issue (in Sound Off, Oct. 18) with our yell leaders who air their "smutty" stories for cheap laughs, which I am sure are appreciated only by a few shallow, non-thinking A&M men. We should all, students and former students alike, build a better A&M University by enhancing our good reputation built on leadership and its fine attributes of honor, courage, decency, enthusiasm and good common sense. The dirty story told in public or private by our students or graduates only tarnishes A&M's stature!

The Battalion:
It seems that there are more than 100 nominees for Who's Who each year. Of this number, I wonder how many self-centered individuals found it necessary to nominate themselves?

If no one deems an individual worthy of this honor but himself, I question the desirability of such an ego centered nominee. Surely a deserving person for Who's Who should have at least one person that recognizes his scholastic and leadership abilities and would nominate him.

So that A&M can be assured of a high level of deserving Who's Who nominees, it seems that this situation should be corrected.

Editor,
The Battalion:
I am a Mother of an Aggie and after reading the letter written by the female, the wife, the Mother in the recent issue of The Battalion, I to have to "Sound Off." The young lady said, "If our presence here is causing lack of Spirit of Aggieland then I feel that it must have been the wrong kind of Spirit all along." This is a cause of great concern to me. Where else in all the world do you find the relationship that Aggie's have for each other. This is welded in a man's world (without women) when you upset this atmosphere you change it. Our great American heritage is based on tradition. This is one of the things that has helped to make our country great and when it dies it cannot be regained.

A&M is a very special school for our young men and I like to think that a very special type of young man seeks out A&M for his higher education. I think when a young man enrolls at A&M he expects to find the discipline of the Corps hard but he also knows that when it is over he will be a "man" and he will have attained his goal of higher education too.

We Mother's listen to the gripes of our boys with heavy hearts because we cannot join in and help in the fight to save the Spirit of Aggieland. We know it is dear to the heart of every Aggie everywhere. We know the importance of tradition in our world today and we are appalled at the young women of today and her attitude of equal rights. We would like to ask her to stop and think again what she is doing or rather destroying. When there are no more mountains for her to climb what will she do then, she will have destroyed her own world and be unhappy in her new roll. I wish that every young lady would read with care Mr. Lloyd Shearer's article in Parade Magazine of Oct. 20, entitled "Why Do Women Go To College" and give it careful thought after she has gotten over her first anger when she reads it.

I hate to see anything as wonderful as Aggie Spirit killed and I don't believe it will die very easily. Once an Aggie, always an Aggie. No other school can truthfully say this about all its alumni.

I remember the first time I visited the A&M campus, how friendly everyone was. It gave me such a warm feeling and I didn't feel like I was among strangers. It wasn't until later when I was reading some of the pamphlets I picked up that I learned about the "Howdy" tradition. Keep it up boys, you don't know what it does for a stranger!

Maybe Mother's should not "Sound Off" but your welfare is our concern and the Spirit of Aggieland is very dear to us too. We say with pride, "My son is an Aggie."

Mrs. Jean Compton
