

Local Civic Group Old Clothes Drive Preparation Begins

Have you any old clothes in the way that you really have no use for but which are too good to throw away?

If so, you can get rid of them and help your fellow man as well by donating them to the second annual clothing drive sponsored by the Bryan Women's Civic League and the local Boy Scouts on Feb. 2.

The clothes will be collected by Boy Scouts, sorted by members of the Bryan Federation of Churches Council and distributed through churches and Parent-Teacher Associations. Last year over 1500 bags and boxes were collected and distributed.

"We need children's clothes of all types and sizes," said Mrs. Hazel Richardson, league president. "We never get too much of them."

"All Aggies are urged to contribute to the drive. Old uniforms and shoes donated by Aggies were happily received last year by working people," said Mrs. Richardson.

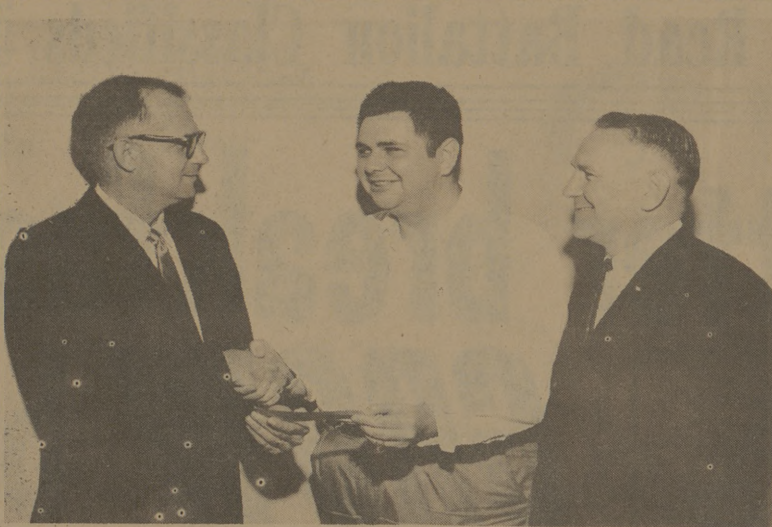

The collection place, which will be somewhere in downtown Bryan, has not been announced yet. Persons wishing to have clothes picked up should contact a member of the local Boy Scout troop.

Wainerdi To Speak At UN Club Friday

The United Nations Club meeting at 7:30 p.m. Friday in the Cashion Room of the YMCA Building will feature a talk by Dr. Richard E. Wainerdi, associate dean of the College of Engineering, club president A. M. Husain has announced.

The public has been invited to hear Wainerdi speak on "Aggies Can Be Proud of These Things."

Refreshments will be served, Husain said. A graduate student in agricultural economics, he is from Pakistan.

Student Receives Scholarship

Lawrence Kelminson, center, has been given a $300 scholarship from the Tom W. Leland Memorial Scholarship Fund of the School of Business Administration. Dr. John E. Pearson, head of the School of Business Administration, presents the check. At right is assistant professor W. E. Eckles.

Needed--A Female, Or He Can't Sail

NEW YORK (AP)—Skipper Lee Quinn is looking for one more sailor for his next South Seas cruise. But no man need apply. He sails only with girls.

For a married man, the Los Gatos, Calif., yachtsman has found a bachelor's dream existence. And that's why he was anxious to get out of blustery New York City Wednesday and back to Sunny Tahiti.

Awaiting him there is his 45-foot ketch, the Neophyte.

And his crew: There's Ava Walker from Honolulu, 5-foot-10, 23 and, in Quinn's words, "very active and very good looking."

And Maria, 20, daughter of a Tahitian pearl diver, dark and exotic with hair so long she can sit on it.

And an American brunette Quinn won't name until the Neophyte sails. "Sometimes their families object," he explained in withholding her identity.

The 11 girls he has skipped so far include a couple of blondes. "Blondes are like throwing gasoline on the fire down in those native islands," he said.

Quinn claims that his wife, Mary Ann, a surfing enthusiast, has no objection to his all-girl crews. In fact, he adds, she was the cause of it.

He was all set to sail the Neophyte alone across the Pacific late in 1962, he explains, when Mary Ann insisted that he take a crew.

"But she didn't say what kind of crew," he said. So he signed on four girls and headed for Honolulu.

He'd rather sail than work. And he'd rather sail with girls crewing. "They have a feminine instinct to please that really helps out."

And they pay for the pleasure about $2.50 a day for food plus their own fare to and from the Neophyte.

Vets To Graduate In January

A&M University will graduate a January class of veterinary medicine students for the first time in about 15 years.

Another class will be graduated next August but not this spring. In the past, veterinary medicine students have been graduated only in the spring.

Dr. Edgar McMurry, assistant dean of the College of Veterinary Medicine, said the change is the result of "phasing" into the new trimester program which starts next fall. After the system is in full effect in 1965, there will be one graduating class a year in August.

He said the trimester program is a three-term school year instead of the usual two semesters. The system has been started to better utilize facilities and shorten the total period a student is in training.

"It does not mean the student receives less training," the assistant dean added. "In fact, he will actually get more training."

McMurry said 55 seniors are scheduled to graduate this January and 59 in August, a total of 114 for 1964.

The College of Veterinary Medicine and its student chapter of the American Veterinary Medical Association will hold the annual Honors Convocation Jan. 13 in the Memorial Student Center.

Dr. A. A. Price, dean of the veterinary college, said the convocation is held to recognize and present awards to outstanding students.

He said the program, which starts at 6:30 p.m., includes a short talk by Dr. Jack O. Knowles of Miami, president of the American Veterinary Medical Association.

The awards are the Faculty Award of Merit for scholarly achievement to the top student in each class; Borden Award to a senior who was an outstanding student as a junior; AVMA Award to the outstanding senior; and the Mrs. Leon G. Cloud Award to the
