DINNERS LUNCHEONS PRIVATE PARTIES

Studies by A&M University marine ichthyology students may prove valuable to fish management authorities when—and if—huge shovels begin scooping out the Trinity River for commercial shipping.

Samples of marine life are being taken for later study at various collecting stations along the Trinity River and Trinity Bay area, Dr. R. J. Baldauf, associate professor of wildlife management, reported.

One aspect of the Trinity Bay study is the effect dredging and commercial shipping might have on the immature commercial species of fish.

The young of many commercial species come from the Gulf of Mexico into bays along the Texas coast for a period, Baldauf said. After using these days as nursery grounds, the fish return to the Gulf to reach maturity.

Baldauf said the Department of Wildlife Management studies are part of a long-range program to determine habits and various types of fishes and crustaceans that inhabit the Trinity River area.

When—and if—the Trinity is dredged and opened for commercial shipping, fish management people will know what fishes will be affected by the operation.

Accident Reports Provide New Laws

Policemen attending the A&M University training school received a briefing Thursday on the "paper work" end of law enforcement.

N. K. Woerner, manager of the Department of Public Safety's statistical division, warned the students that record keeping can lead to better laws, which, in turn, can save lives.

He pointed to the mounting Texas traffic fatality list as an indication that better traffic controls are needed.

"During 1963," Woerner said, "2,725 persons were killed on Texas streets and highways, which is more than 300 above the 1962 high and 114 more than the previous all time high."

As an example of how records control accidents, Woerner mentioned that local accident reports filed with the Department of Public Safety are studied to determine the major causes.

Dangerous intersections, for instance, can be pinpointed, and the findings can be turned over to traffic engineers for a solution.

"In other cases," the Austin speaker said, "accident reports point out the need for new traffic laws at various trouble spots."

At the same time, a report is maintained on each Texas driver license holder, Woerner said, and each time he is involved in an accident, the incident is recorded "no matter whether he was at fault or not."

"Some may question the fairness of such reporting," Woerner added, "but we work with drivers who have had numerous accidents, regardless of the fault."

He mentioned a Fort Worth bus driver who had been involved in 15 accidents during a short period. In all cases, the cars had struck the rear end of the bus.

"We were finally able to convince this man that, contrary to the police records, he was partly at fault," Woerner commented. "His attitude changed, and no additional accidents have been reported in the last three years."

Woerner is one of several representatives from the state traffic agency who discussed various phases of law enforcement. The class toured the DPS building in Austin Tuesday.

The four-week training school for policemen, sponsored by the Engineering Extension Service, continues through Friday.

FFA, 4-H's To Judge Here

Texas high school vocational agriculture teachers have been invited to bring student 4-H and Future Farmers of America teams to A&M University March 7 for practice judging sessions.

John Holcomb, associate professor in the Department of Agricultural Education, said the judging will cover livestock, dairy cattle, meats, poultry, grasses, land and dairy products.

"A vocational agriculture teacher who was overlooked in the original invitation, or who has misplaced his entry blank, may enter by sending the number of boys in each division and the number expecting to eat in the dining hall to Dr. G. M. Watkins, director of agricultural instruction at A&M," Holcomb added.

He said there is no entry fee for the practice contests. He advised teachers to make room reservations early because of other weekend activities on the campus.

BACKGROUND FOR MARRIAGE

Next year George will be a civil engineer from Tech. And Meredith is studying Home Economics at State.

If you were their parents, wouldn't you consider that a pretty good background for marriage? Boy with a promising profession! Girl with a sound grasp of the family budget!

But should we be so naive? What they study in college is foreground, not background. It equips our sons and daughters for the immediate opportunities and obligations the future presents.

The permanence of love is not rooted in engineering or economics. Designing bridges and planning menus are not keys to a lasting happy marriage.

Personal character determines the ability of a man and woman to meet the demands of sacrifice and unselfishness that marriage requires. The Church molds character as it builds faith. For character is one of the by-products of faith . . .

. . . The ability to love unselfishly is another!

THE CHURCH FOR ALL ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.
