

Poultry Scientist Resigns, To Join Consumer Co-op

George Draper, veteran member of the Department of Poultry Science, has resigned effective Tuesday to join the Consumer Co-operative Association.

The CCA is a regional organization that provides other co-operatives with petroleum, feed, fertilizer and farm buildings.

Draper will be the CCA's poultry specialist and territory developer in Texas and continue to live in College Station.

The poultryman, a widely recognized authority on turkeys, is supervisor of the National Turkey and Poultry Improvement Plan in Texas.

Easter Services Set Monday Night

Rex Arthur (Prof) Smith, associate director of the Baptist Student Union at A&M University, will speak at this year's Easter Service to be held in the All Faiths Chapel at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

Under the direction of the civilian and cadet chaplains, the service is held annually.

The Rev. Mr. Smith, who has been associated with the local

BSU group since 1947, also teaches several Bible classes at the Baptist Student Center.

Over 3,000 Aggies have had Bible courses under Rev. Smith since he began his tenure at A&M.

A well-known figure to Baptist students as well as to Aggies of other faiths, Rev. Smith has held hundreds of conferences with A&M students.

The list of his Bible students in past years includes such former Aggie athletes as Art Harnden, olympic quartermiler, and football standouts Bob Smith, Jack Little and Charles Milstead.

He has fathered two Aggie graduates: Richard Allen Smith, '60, and John Robert Smith, '62. His third son, James Bradley Smith, plans to enter A&M next fall.

The Singing Cadets will render special music at the services.

JP's Get Briefing On Legal Problems

Twenty-two delegates to the Justice of the Peace and Constable's Institute heard Wednesday from speakers on a wide assortment of legal problems, ranging from game law violations to trial procedures.

Robert S. Evins of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department asked a barrage of questions regarding some of the complex hunting and fishing laws.

Evins reminded the law enforcement officers that a hunting or fishing license cannot be forfeited in a justice court, although cases amounting up to $200 in fines can be heard. Persons without a license can be charged in justice court, he added.

The district conservation chief discussed special provisions of game regulations, including the more recently adopted trespassing law.

W. C. Davis, Brazos County judge, outlined plea procedures and the trial process.

William R. Vance of Bryan, assistant county attorney, reported on various specific offenses such as assault, battery, gaming, vagrancy and others.

The institute continues through Friday, with noted speakers from various fields of law enforcement.

Sunspots have been observed and described since the ancient Chinese thought they saw "flying birds" in the sun.
