

Oklahoma Dean To Discuss Future Of Agriculture Here

Dr. Randall J. Jones, Oklahoma State University's dean of resident instruction for agriculture, will be speaker at the annual Agricultural Convocation Thursday.

His topic is "Facing the Future in Agriculture."

The dean also planned to address College of Agriculture faculty members at 3:30 p.m. the same day in Room 146 of the Physics Building. He will discuss "Qualities of a Good Teacher."

Jerry Simpton of Port Bolivar, convocation committee chairman, said the meeting is held each year to bring faculty and students together and hear authorities speak on agricultural developments.

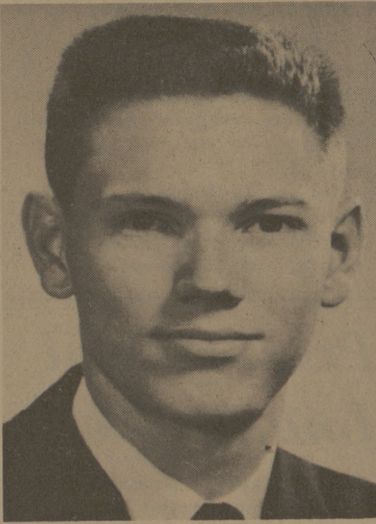

He said the convocation program, to be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Memorial Student Center Ballroom, will include presentation of Awards of Merit to outstanding seniors in the College of Agriculture. The awards are based on academic standing, activities and leadership.

College of Agriculture department heads also will be introduced, Simpton added.

Jones was graduated from Oklahoma State in 1936 with a degree in crops and soils. His MS and PhD degrees came during the 1937-39 period at the University of Wisconsin.

He was associated professor and associate soil chemist at Alabama Polytechnic Institute from 1939-44 and chief in the soils and fertilizer research branch of Tennessee Valley Authority, 1944-49.

In 1949, Jones was named associate director of the Mississippi State College Agricultural Experiment Station. He became associate dean and associate director of resident instruction in 1951 at Oklahoma State and was appointed to his present position in 1954.

WILLIAM D. LEDBETTER

Graduate Student Selected To Study At Oslo University

A College Station native and A&M University graduate, William Dean Letbetter has been named a Fulbright Fellow for study at the University of Oslo this next academic year.

Letbetter is one of eight Americans chosen to study in Norway as Fulbright Fellows. The program provides living, educational and travel expenses. His wife will accompany him.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Letbetter of Highway 6, South, Letbetter hopes to complete studies for a Master of Science in Physics degree before sailing for Norway early in August. The elder Letbetter is a professor in the School of Business Administration.

YOUNG LETBETTER was graduated with honors last May, receiving the B.S. degree in physics. Four years earlier he was valedictorian of his class at A&M Consolidated High School.

"We're just elated over it," Letbetter said of his selection.

HE WAS NOTIFIED by the State Department and also has received letters from two professors of the Anatomical Institute of the University of Oslo.

Letbetter will be working in Oslo under Dr. Birger Kaada and Dr. Per Anderson, who has worked for two years under a Nobel Prize winner.

His special field of interest both at A&M and as a Fulbright Fellow is the young field of biophysics, the application of physical methods in the study of biological systems.

He now is working especially on Dr. O. D. Stittler, assistant professor of physics and biophysics. "I WAS INTERESTED in everything but my senior year in high school I enjoyed a physics course and decided I might try it in college," Bill said.

While a senior at A&M Consolidated, he also was a research participant at A&M through National Science Foundation program.

The Letbetters already have begun a concentrated study of the Norwegian language.

They and other Americans going to Norway will sail from New York Aug. 8 and arrive in Oslo Aug. 11 and will return to College Station in about a year.

Bengali Dictionary Printed

First printing of a dictionary in Bengali, a language most Texans have never heard, has been exhausted and is being reprinted here.

Bengali, the language of East Pakistan and eastern India, is spoken by about as many people as French, Jack A. Dabbs of A&M University's Department of Modern Languages, said.

The Bengali-English, English-

Bengali dictionary published here two years ago was the first to show Bengali words with both English and Bengali alphabets.

"The biggest purchaser of the book was the Peace Corps, but orders have come from individuals and book dealers in European nations, Australia, Pakistan and the U. S.," Dabbs noted.

Sears-Roebuck Foundation Honors Scholarship Winners

The Sears-Roebuck Foundation honored 10 of its A&M University scholarship winners at a banquet here Tuesday night.

Recipients of the 1963-64 awards are nine freshmen and one sophomore in the College of Agriculture. The sophomore scholarship went to the student who won one of the awards as a freshman, based on his first-year record.

Representing Sears at the dinner was J. P. Plain of Dallas, regional director of the Foundation.

A&M officials attending were President Earl Rudder; Dr. M. T.

Harrington, chancellor of the A&M System; Dr. John Hutchison, director, Texas Agricultural Extension Service; and Dr. H. O. Kunkel, assistant director, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

Others were Dr. G. M. Watkins, director of agricultural instruction; Dr. R. C. Potts, assistant director of agricultural instruction; and Robert M. Logan, assistant director of Placement and Student Aid.

Jack Nowlin, manager of the Sears store in Bryan, and his assistant, O. B. Kay, also attended.
