Her Performance Stirs A Community
Kristi Honson, 16, rehearses the part of "Lola" in a high school production of the musical "Damn Yankees." Seated on the knee of her leading man, Mitch Skelding, she wears the brief black outfit with a split skirt she uses for a dance on the stage. Criticism of the performance by Rev. Raymond Bierlein of the Ionia, Mich., Episcopal Church provoked a controversy among the townspeople and resulted in the ex-communication of a couple from the church. (AP Wirephoto)

Management Seminar Set

The first of three management seminars planned here this year by the A&M University School of Business Administration will begin May 3, Dr. John E. Pearson has announced.

Week-long seminars with attendance limited to 25 managerial level enrollees will start May 3, Aug. 9 and Oct 25, the business administration head said.

"The seminars are planned as intensive educational experiences with concentrated study of inter-related managerial skills and concepts," Seminar Director W. E. Eckles noted. He is a member of the business administration faculty and also directs the broader three-week Executive Development Course. Registration for the first seminar is complete with participants from manufacturing, insurance, petroleum and the utilities industries, Eckles added.

"We pioneered this seminar program in 1962-63 at the request of several business and industries, and in response to requests from these and other companies with comparable needs, the management seminars are being offered this year," he pointed out.

The seminar faculty will include A&M faculty members and other authorities.
