Rudder Appoints Air Science Head

Col. Raymond C. Lee who has combined Air Force careers as a jet fighter pilot and teacher comes to A&M University as professor of air science and head of the Air Force Reserve Officer Training Corps detachment.

A&M President Earl Rudder announced the appointment effective July 15.

Colonel Lee will report here from the Air War College faculty at Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala., to succeed Col. James F. Starkey who remains here temporarily on special assignment.

Lee served as a jet fighter pilot in Korean combat. He also has been an educator at the Air Force Academy and the Air War College.

A native of Philadelphia, he holds bachelor's and master's degrees from Pennsylvania State University. Lee has done additional graduate work in psychology at the University of Minnesota.

The Air Force colonel went to the Air War College as a student in 1959. Upon completion of the course he joined the faculty as an instructor.

Earlier Lee was a leadership training officer at the Air Force Academy.

Lee became an aviation cadet in 1942. Following World War II service as a fighter pilot, he completed his education.

He flew 22 combat missions in Korea in 1953-54 and then was assigned to the Pentagon.

The colonel wears the Korean Service Medal, United Nations Service Medal, Air Medal, Air Force Commendation Medal and other decorations and awards.

Colonel and Mrs. Lee have two daughters. One is a University of Colorado student and the other attends high school.

AMONG THE PROFS Poultry Scientists Slate Annual Meeting In Dallas

Twelve members of the Department of Poultry Science will participate in the American Poultry and Hatchery Federation's annual meeting July 21-23 in Dallas.

Dr. J. H. Quisenberry, head of the department, said the session will mark the first time for the Federation to hold its convention in Texas.

In addition to Quisenberry, department participants are Dr. C. B. Ryan, Dr. W. F. Krueger, Dr. J. E. Couch, Dr. F. A. Gardner, Dr. R. C. Fanguy, Dr. R. L. Atkinson, Ben Wormeli, W. O. Cawley, Marshall Miller, John Bradley, and Dr. Jim Deaton. Wormeli, Cawley and Miller are Agricultural Extension Service specialists.

Quisenberry will moderate a panel discussion on "Where We Stand Now in PPLO Control."

Another staff member on the program is William S. Allen, agricultural engineer with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. He will take part in a symposium on "Looking at the Newest and Best in Poultry Housing Across the United States."

Three papers will be presented by A&M scientists at a National Cotton Council program July 13-16 in Asheville, North Carolina.

The scientists are Dr. Wayne C. Hall, dean of the Graduate College; Dr. H. E. Joham, professor of plant sciences; and Dr. J. W. Dieckert, associate professor of biochemistry.

The invitational meeting will cover basic biochemistry of cotton. About 70 scientists in the United States will attend.

Hall will talk on the role of ethylene and enzyme systems in the biomechanisms influencing abscission. Joham's talk will cover influence of manganese and molybdenum on biomechanisms and plant functions.

Mobilization of stored metals and their re-distribution in plants is Dieckert's topic.

A&M personnel invited to participate in the discussions are Dr. D. R. Ergle, Jack Gibson, Dr. Joseph Haeskaylo and Dr. P. W. Morgan, all of the Department of Plant Sciences; Dr. H. O. Kunkel, associate director of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, and Dr. Carl Lyman, head of the Department of Biochemistry and Nutrition.

Dr. W. F. Krueger of the Department of Poultry Science will present two papers during a poultry industry conference July 27-31 at the Technological Institute of Monterrey in Mexico.

His papers are titled "Producing Quality Hatching Eggs" and "Breeding for Performance in Egg and Broiler Stocks."

Dr. William H. Graves, Jr., of Beaumont, director of the Lamar Area School Study Council, has been named to the A&M faculty.

He will join the Department of Education and Psychology Sept. 1, Dr. Paul R. Hensarling, department head, announced. He leaves a staff position at Lamar State College.

Dr. L. R. Richardson, head of the Agricultural Analytical Services, has just returned from a meeting of the Southern Interstate Nuclear Board in Atlanta, Ga.

Richardson participated as an advisor on wholesomeness of irradiated foods.
