Growth Of A&M Attributed To Top University Officials

The growth and excellence of A&M can be attributed to the top administrative university officials. The administrators are constantly working toward the betterment of the university not only in name, but in mind and spirit.

Dr. M. T. Harrington, chancellor of the A&M University System, has served at A&M as professor, Dean of Arts and Sciences, dean and president of the college. He became system chancellor in 1953.

President Earl Rudder began college at Tarleton State College and received his B. S. degree in industrial education at A&M in 1932.

Rudder became president in 1959 after serving as vice president for one year.

Dean of Students James P. Hannigan came to A&M after retiring from the Army as a brigadier general in July of 1959. Hannigan is responsible for the development and welfare of students in areas other than academic.

Dr. William J. Graff Jr. assumed the position of Dean of Instruction in 1961. He works closely with the views of the faculty to the administration and the views of administration to the faculty.

Dean of Arts and Sciences Frank W. R. Hubert studied history, government and education administration and received three degrees, from the University of Texas. Hubert joined the A&M staff in 1959.

The Dean of Engineering, Fred J. Benson, first came to A&M in 1937 as an instructor. He is former vice-director of the Texas Engineering Experiment Station and executive officer for the Texas Transportation Institute.

Dr. Wayne C. Hall became Dean of the Graduate School in 1960. In addition to his direction of graduate studies, Hall is an active researcher in plant pathology and physiology.

Dean of Agriculture R. E. Patterson has served at A&M since 1943 and as dean since 1960.

Patterson received a bachelors in agriculture from Louisiana State University and received his Masters and Doctorate at A&M.

Dr. Alvin A. Price became Dean of the College of Veterinary Medicine in 1957. He received his D.V.M.

from A&M after receiving his B. S. in dairy husbandry and serving in the Army.

Col. Denzil L. Baker assumed duties as professor of Military Science in 1963. He directs Army ROTC instruction and oversees the operation of the Corps. Baker is a 1933 A&M graduate and a veteran of WW II and the Korean Conflict.

Capt. Bennett M. Dodson became head of the Texas Maritime Academy with its creation in 1962. Dodson has commanded a destroyer and was executive officer of the battleship Iowa.

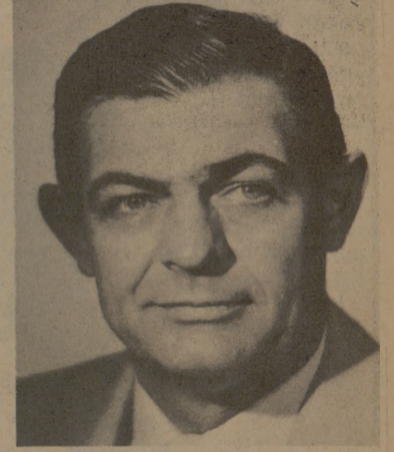

H. L. Heaton has served in the registrar's office at A&M since 1934. Heaton holds his B. S. degree from Stephen F. Austin State Teachers College and his M. S. from A&M.

Tom D. Cherry is Director of Business Affairs for the university and is responsible for overall business of the school.

Dr. Andrew D. Suttle Jr. is vice president for research. He is a graduate of Mississippi State, and received his doctorate from the University of Chicago.
