Texas GOP Hears Miller; State Demos Open Conclave

By The Associated Press
Texas Republicans, spurred to a high enthusiasm by party favorites including a member of the national ticket, turned their state convention Tuesday into a rally to kick off campaigning for the November elections.

Sen. Barry Goldwater and I in the weeks ahead will wage the most vigorous campaign we know of," vice presidential nominee William Miller told the 4,200 delegates and spectators jammed into the municipal auditorium.

"We are convinced this election isn't going to be decided by the columnists or the pollsters but by the people of the nation," Miller brought delegates to their feet with cheers and jeers as he derided President Johnson and his running mate, Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota.

Miller's charge that the Johnsons inserted an anti-Negro clause in a deed to Austin land elicited cries of happy surprise and a standing ovation led by a Negro delegate.

Miller's 40-minute speech almost overshadowed the convention's primary task; writing a platform for gubernatorial nominee Jack Crichton of Dallas Texas Democrats sped through an unspectacular state convention Tuesday, pausing occasionally for brief bursts of applause for President Johnson and other Democratic nominees.

The major tasks of adopting a party platform and selecting party officers were accomplished without a test vote of the 5,669 delegates or a voice raised in argument from the convention floor.

Many delegates and most spectators deserted the hall during the final droning minutes.

The convention lasted three hours

Placement Service Slates Orientation

Job prospects and the operation of the placement service for graduating students will be outlined at meetings next week, announced W. R. Horsley, placement officer.

Seniors and graduate students are invited to attend one of the meetings at 4 p.m. on Sept. 22, 23 and 24 in the Memorial Student Center Assembly Room.

"The first on-campus interviews for graduating students are scheduled here by prospective employers for the week of Oct. 12," Horsley said.

Students unable to attend have been urged to contact Horsley's office on the third floor of the YMCA Building.

and 17 minutes with Gov. John Connally calling all signals without a bobble or worried moment.

"This is the type of convention I like," Connally said later, with a grin.

Sen. Ralph Yarborough, whose supporters challenged Connally unsuccessfully at the first state convention in June, was not present. He was in Dallas Monday night for a big campaign fund dinner but returned to Washington Tuesday for a Senate vote.

Information Staff Adds Britt Martin

Britt Martin, a 29-year-old newsman with a collection of top writing honors, has joined the A&M University information staff, director Jim Lindsey has announced.

Martin moved here this week from The Dallas Times Herald where he was assistant county editor. He was formerly city editor and columnist for the Bryan Daily Eagle.

Martin has several journalism awards to his credit. He won first place in headline writing in the Associated Press Managing Editors Contest in 1962 and honorable mention in 1963 in spot news coverage while with the Eagle.

While at Paris, Martin was a member of a news team which received special national recognition from the Associated Press for coverage of a school bus wreck near Cooper in which a number of students from Mount Vernon died. He won several APME awards for sports news and column writing while with the Paris News. He was chairman of the selection committee for high school baseball coach of the year in 1962, and served on several all-state committees in football, baseball and basketball.

New Corps 'Standard' Revises Cadet Policy

By LARRY JERDEN
Staff Writer

When the Corps of Cadets began their operations for the 1964-65 school year, they did so under a completely revised set of rules. "The Cadence," "Aggie Code of Honor," "Social Customs," "Cadet Code of Conduct" and "Articles of the Cadet Corps" have all been incorporated in "The Standard."

This new Corps guidebook is divided into two sections, "Cadence" and "Articles of the Cadet Corps."

The "Cadence" section gives a brief history of the university and presents the tradition of the institution and the Cadet Corps. It also lists, in its code of conduct, the high ideals expected of every cadet. In both the "Cadence" and the "Articles," high moral standards and integrity are held before cadets as the Aggie way of life.

Some changes have been made in the "Articles," and the overall effect is considered a great improvement over the previous standards. As in any change some of the new regulations will be extremely unpopular among the cadets.

One long-time source of trouble in the Corps has been the inconsistency among the outfits of various "outfit policies." Article 9-10, if followed, should go far in limiting this condition. It says, in part, "No cadet commander or any other cadet will publish 'policies' . . . that are in any way in conflict or supplementary to these Articles without prior approval of the Commandant."

Another change in the "Articles" involves the role of sophomores in the training and disciplining of freshmen. Article 9-11 states that ". . . Third classmen . . . will not give orders, instruct or discipline privates of the class junior to them, except to cadets of their own respective units . . . and then only when specified by their unit commander and when acting as a squad leader or assistant squad leader.

Another condition which has been emphasized is the enforcement of soliciting in the dorms during call to quarters. This practice is expressly prohibited in Article 12.

Drinking is, by many Aggie, considered "good bull," but Article 27 states in its entirety "Any degree of drunkenness or disorderly conduct resulting therefrom is a Category I offense." This type of offense is punishable by action of the Commandant or higher university authority. The article on drunkenness makes no mention of time, place or circumstances.

For perhaps the first time in the history of the Corps, all authorized unit details are outlined in the "Articles." This article, along with the one concerning outfit policies, should insure uniform operations throughout the Corps, cadets have said.

Also detailed in the "Articles" are all the authorized privileges of each class. Seniors are, by Article 59-6 authorized to wear "Bull Peaks," a privilege long taken, but never printed.

Most of the other changes have been the removal of certain other traditions and privileges. One of extreme unpopularity according to some upperclassmen is the regulation concerning the green shirt and pants for juniors.

The green pants are unauthorized and 10 demerits are awarded to any cadet who violates this directive. The green shirt is optional for first and second classmen. It is, according to Article 59-2a, an optional Class B uniform. Article 59-6i states, however, that whenever the green shirt is worn, it will be worn with the khaki tie.

"The Standard" is a virtually complete outline of Corps procedures, privileges and punishments.

Changes Noted For Phones

A new alteration has been added to the proposed all-campus telephone system that has a timetable for 1966, Dr. Clark C. Munroe, director of the Personnel Office, commented Tuesday.

"It was first proposed that all university dormitory rooms would have a telephone, but the plan now reads that only a part of the university dorms will have telephones installed," Munroe continued.

This plan was resolved to help students who did not desire phones in their rooms and for those who would be unable to pay for the telephone service charge. Present estimate indicate the room telephone service will cost between $3 and $3.75 a month, but the exact cost has not yet been determined.

The timetable hinges on the new proposed library which will be built soon. Because the Centrex Telephone System will be installed in the library, the telephone service will have to follow the course set by library completion.

The Centrex Telephone System is the complex operating device which will handle the campus calls plus all local and out of town connections.

This system was first designed to be installed in the Academic Building, but the cost of re-building would exceed the proposed plan estimate. The Academic Building was also picked because the system is designed for the most centrally located spot, but even with the added material to be used in the library system, the cost would still be less than the re-building and repairing of the Academic Building, Munroe noted.

The Centrex system will be placed in the library basement where no student activity will be held.

Munroe added, "For those who want telephones, they will be available and telephones will be a great help to everybody—students and administration."

"This is a new trend. Michigan State and Texas have a similar system and more will be going into it in the future," he added.

Bryan High School Holds Adult Classes

The fall session of the Adult Education Program at Stephen F. Austin High School has been announced by John Lucas, director of the program.

Registration begins Wednesday at Stephen F. Austin High School and classes start Sept. 28. Classes will meet each Monday, Tuesday and Thursday at 6 p.m.

The evening school of the Adult Education Division of the Bryan Public Schools was organized to offer all adults in the surrounding communities the same educational opportunities available to those who attend the Bryan high schools.

The evening school is open to any person 16 years of age or older who is not attending any high school during the day and who wishes to further his knowledge or skill by additional study.

Courses will be offered in most approved high school subjects, including English, history, government, science, mathematics, book-keeping, typing, shorthand and art.

A new course in principles of design will be added this year. The course will include analysis and application of the principles of design and the use of lines, shapes, space, color and texture. The study of design will be applied according to the interests and backgrounds of those taking the course.

Industrial Development Meet To Open Sessions Thursday

A Dallas electronics executive will be the spotlighted speaker for the opening luncheon of the 14th annual Texas Industrial Development conference Thursday at the Ramada Inn.

Robert McCulloch, chairman of the executive committee of Ling-Temco-Vaughn Inc., of Dallas, will address an estimated 250-300 industrial developers.

Registration will begin at 8 a.m. Thursday for the conference. A&M University President Earl Rudder will welcome the group and Arthur A. Smith, vice president and economist of First National of Dallas, will open the conference at 9:20 a.m. with a discussion of past, present and future economic trends.

Other top executives scheduled to speak during the two-day conference include Paul R. Thompson, a General Electric Co. official; John B. Turner Jr., Humble Oil and Refining Co.; L. C. AuBuchon,

3 Grad Assistants Hired For English

Three graduate assistants have been added to the Department of English faculty, according to Dr. John Q. Anderson, department head.

The students are all studying for their master's degrees here and bring the total to eight teaching assistants and two non-teaching assistants hired by the department this year.

The newly-appointed assistants are David E. White of Big Sandy, Roberta L. Hursey of Flagstaff, Ariz., and Dan D. Mast of Poplar Bluff, Mo.

Air Force Honors
