Salemen Descend—
'Retreat, Hell!'

Seniors, don your helmet liners, draw your sabers and bar the door for within a few weeks you might become the victim of the scourge of the college campus—the salesman.

His methods are elusive and tactful and he will be out to sell everything from automobiles to insurance.

And you are his special target. As a senior in college you are what the loan companies dub "A good risk." Within a year your degree will be earning you enough to live adequately, if not comfortably—unless you happen to sign on the dotted line with one of these vultures without thinking first.

University regulations prohibit unauthorized soliciting in the dorms, but this leaves the mail, telephone and even "chance" contacts off campus.

This is not to say all offers extended during your final year here should be avoided. But even the most well-intended purchase can be a trap for the unwary, regardless of the integrity of the salesman.

Houston Eyes
Aggie Conduct

Today the eyes of Houston will be on Texas A&M and the conduct of each Aggie will be under far more scrutiny than a freedom rider in Mississippi.

Contests with University of Houston are rarely friendly—especially when the antagonistic cougar is beaten in his own lair. But far more important than the outcome of this grid contest is the impression A&M students leave upon the people of Houston.

The city is a strong supporter of this university and its backing is not limited to athletic contests. Misconduct by just one student can destroy Houston's image of the Aggie man.

This is not to say to turn your back on an Aggie in trouble. Ask him who started it when it's all over.

Senate Asks Courts To Slow Reapportionment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate adopted Thursday a non-binding request to federal courts to go slowly in reapportioning state legislatures on a population basis. Doing so, it removed a major obstacle to early adjournment of Congress — perhaps next week.

The 44-38 roll call was a victory for liberal Democratic senators who since Aug. 12 have been conducting an on-and-off filibuster against a proposal to impose a mandatory delay in district courts' application of the Supreme Court's one-man, one-vote ruling.

This decision provides that both houses of state legislatures be apportioned on a population basis. Under it, district courts can redistrict states when legislatures fail to do so.

Thursday's vote was on a rider to the $3.3 billion foreign aid authorization bill, passage of which before adjournment is a legislative must for the Johnson administration.

The amendment adopted Thursday was offered by Sen. Mike Mansfield, the Democratic leader from Montana, as a substitute for one proposed by Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, the Republican leader from Illinois.

The aim of the Dirksen proposal — for a time cosponsored by Mansfield — was to stall court redistricting orders for one to two years to allow time for adoption of a constitutional amendment upsetting the Supreme Court ruling, at least to the extent of permitting states to have one branch of the legislature apportioned on a geographical basis.

Autos Attack House

DALLAS (AP) — Douglas Davis considers himself lucky when cars that shoot into his yard miss his house.

In a year seven cars have gone out of control and careened onto his property.

At a late date a sports car was chained to his front porch. It has been there a year. "I'm not going to move it until something is done about paying for damages to my house," Davis said.

Last June 13, a car crumbled the chimney of the house. Ten days later a car overturned, landing in his back yard.

On other occasions, cars have collided with his pickup truck in his driveway and bumped the house and caused minor damage.

The Davis' seven children have orders to stay inside the house or play on the side of the structure away from the curve.

One of the seven rooms has been demolished by automobiles. None of the drivers had insurance to pay for the damages.

Davis said he had tried to get the city and the state highway department to erect barricades or a guard rail to protect his property.
