

Wildlife Study Enrolls Women For First Time

Judith N. Davis of Scotch Plains, N. J., became the first woman to enroll for graduate study in wildlife management this fall at A&M quite by accident.

A spring graduate of Cornell University, Judith decided she wanted to see more of the country while working toward a masters degree. She chose A&M after studying universities which offer graduate programs in wildlife management.

She didn't realize then that A&M was basically for men. Even when she discovered the situation, she was not disturbed. After all, she had been the lone girl to graduate from Cornell in her field.

A longtime love of the out-of-doors prompted the native of Cleveland to choose wildlife management as a career.

"I have always liked animals and the out-of-doors," she said. "When I graduate, I'd like to do field work for museums or some kind of state conservation work."

She has a dog, a hamster and several fish at home in New Jersey.

She earned her B.S. degree in vertebrate zoology and was a pre-veterinary student until she changed her major as a sophomore.

"I'm enjoying A&M so far. In a way I was surprised with my reception here because I expected a little opposition," she commented. "People have been pretty tolerant, really."

A football and basketball fan, Miss Davis said, "I'm impressed with the school spirit here, especially after coming from an Ivy League school where sports are secondary."

As part of her undergraduate program, Miss Davis worked on a farm one summer near Binghamton, N. Y., operating a tractor, milking cows and driving a truck for a hay crew.

"It was an experience," she recalled with a grin.

She also worked as a nature counselor in a summer camp in Pennsylvania.

Holder of a graduate fellowship, Miss Davis works about 10 hours each week cataloging wildlife specimens for the graduate department.

Carrying 16 hours of courses for this semester, Miss Davis expects to do a good deal of studying. "It's not going to be a snap," she pointed out.

"I'm planning on taking a lot of courses and may not graduate until the end of 1966," she added.

Photography is her hobby, and she is making a collection of wildlife photos.

"Men? — They are kind of nice to have around," she confided.

Tech To Challenge Aggie Rifle Team

A&M's Rifle team will host Texas Tech here at 9:30 a.m. Saturday to open the Southwest Rifle Association season. The six-men teams will fire on A&M's 50-foot range under Kyle Field.

"I think we'll have a strong team this season," Lt. Col. Frank S. Hertzog, officer-in-charge of the Aggie team, said. He pointed out the riflemen finished strong last season and lost only three seniors.

In the spring the team won top honors in the Southwest Invitational Tournament held at El Paso competing against 35 teams from the Southwest and West. The victory included outscoring Arlington State College which tied with the University of Houston for top honors last year in the Southwest Rifle Association. The Aggies ranked behind Arlington and Houston last season.

Aggie Carl E. Long of Dallas captains the 1964 team and Charles F. Wetherbee of Amarillo is team secretary.

"The team is not a Cadet team, it's a Texas A&M team," Hertzog stressed. "We are interested in any person, Cadet or civilian, who is a good shot, as we want the team to represent the best marksmen in the undergraduate student body."

Twenty Aggies, including 11 from the varsity and freshman teams of last year, have tried out this season. Eighteen have indicated interest in the first-year team.

The six Aggies who will compete Saturday against Tech will be announced before the match.

After an open date next week, the Aggies will host Texas Christian University riflemen Oct. 17 and U of H on Oct. 31.

In November the Aggies have three Southwest Rifle Association matches away from home. On Nov. 7 they will travel to Arlington; Nov. 14 to Rice, and Nov. 21 to the University of Texas.

"We also hope to send one five-man team to the Kansas State Turkey Shoot at Manhattan, Kan., on Dec. 4-6," Hertzog said. "This

181 Fish Exempted In English Study

One hundred and eighty-one freshman students have been given advanced placement this fall in freshman English and are therefore exempted from the first semester of composition Dr. John Q. Anderson, Department of English, has announced.

"This program recognizes what the advanced student has already accomplished in high school," Anderson said. "It also helps us to pay tribute to high schools that have strong programs in English."

"The student," Anderson said, "who has already mastered writing techniques taught in the first term is placed in more advanced work so that his progress is continuous."

The 181 freshmen who qualified for advanced standing in English scored high on an English achievement test and presented a satisfactory sample of their writing.

Aggies Whip Out, At 50 MPH?

Aggieland is well known for its traditions and customs such as whipping out to meet an unknown Aggie.

Two Aggies on their way to the University of Houston-A&M game last weekend displayed what may well have been the greatest example yet of this tradition.

They were seen whipping out on the Gulf Freeway in Houston—from car to car while speeding along at 50 miles per hour.

Public Seminars Scheduled On Fraternal Experiments

Dr. W. S. Connor, a visiting professor in the Institute of Statistics, is conducting a series of seminars on "Fractional Factorial Experiments." The first series of the session is being held on Fridays from 4 to 5 p.m. in Room 115 of the Animal Industries Building.

Connor is from the Triangle Research Institute in North Carolina. He received his bachelor's degree at Davidson College, North Carolina. He earned his master's and doctorate in mathematical statistics at the University of North Carolina.

He was formerly with Johnson and Johnson in New Brunswick, N. J. Before that he worked in the Engineering Laboratory of the U. S. Bureau of Standards where he was the senior co-author of a number of publications issued by the Bureau.

The seminars are open to the public.

Jack Inglis, instructor in the Department of Wildlife Management, worked for the ecology section of the Health Physics Division of Oak Ridge National Laboratory this summer.

Inglis' job was designing research to show differences in radio sensitivity of certain rodents.

"In the past, experiments on laboratory rats and mice were thought to be sufficient," Inglis said, "but currently there is a need to determine how different species of animals react to irradiation."

Planned irradiations conducted by Inglis successfully depleted most of the animal colony in the ecology section.

"When I left," he said, "there were five surviving animals and the people in the ecology section were hurriedly collecting more animals with which to continue the study."

Dr. Donald E. Emon has joined the staff of the College of Engineering as assistant professor, Beth Hutchinson, Department of Nuclear Engineering secretary, has announced.

Emon was previously employed in the Department of Advanced Reactor Engineering at Knolls Atomic Power Laboratory in Schenectady, N. Y.

The appointments of William J. Harper of Sulphur Springs as assistant research engineer and Phillip G. Manke of Stillwater, Okla., as graduate assistant were announced by Bob M. Galloway, head of the Department of Highway Materials of the Texas Transportation Institute at A&M.

Harper received his M.S. degree in civil engineering with a major in highway materials from A&M in August. He has worked for the Texas Highway Department and served on major committees of the Texas Society of Professional Engineers in the Northeast Texas and Brazos chapters.
