Desalter May Open Again In 3 Years

Dr. R. R. Davison, chemical engineering research professor at A&M, said Friday that the recently closed water desalting pilot plant at the Research Annex may reopen in 1967.

The plant was installed about six months ago with funds provided by the Office of Saline Water, a division of the U. S. Department of Interior.

Davison said "an official of the OSW intimated to me that funds will become available for reactivation of the plant in 1967."

Davison pointed out that the OSW was unable to include the local research plant in its budget for the year. He indicated most of its budget went to the seawater freezing plant at Wrightsville Beach, N. C., and to demonstration plants at Freeport, San Diego, Calif., Roswell, N. M., and Webster, N. D.

The professor said it would take a "pretty large electro-dialysis plant" to convert water from the Brazos River at a rate of 25 cents per 1,000 gallons. He declined to make an estimate of the cost of such an installation.

"The OSW originally meant to move the plant anyway. But they found that plant facilities in other areas would not be able to reduce the cost of production here," Davison commented.

"Brazos water is almost drinkable now," he continued. "The City of Marlin mixed it with lake water this summer and used only filters and chlorination to improve it... however, it tasted horrible."

Davison said the $130,000 plant will be maintained during the next two or three years by funds provided by the OSW. He said the laboratory will be kept in operation, but much of the equipment is being dismantled and packed to prevent rusting.

30 Seniors Get Air Force Top Awards

Thirty A&M seniors have been selected as Distinguished Cadets in the Air Force Reserve Officer Training Corps, announced Col. R. C. Lee, professor of air science. CAMPUS BRIEFS

17 Agriculture Students Awarded Scholarships

Seventeen A&M College of Agriculture students have received scholarships in recognition of leadership, activities and academic standing.

The scholarships and amounts to each student are Ralston-Purina Company, $500; Sears Foundation, $300; Moorman Manufacturing Company, $300; and the Kroger Company, $250.

Stephen P. Hammack of Ferris, senior animal husbandry major, received the Ralston-Purina Scholarship.

Winners of the Sears award are Albert N. Allen of Carrizo Springs; Ralph M. Engelmann, Manor; Juan De Dios Lopez, Alice; Leon R. Macha, Wharton; Larry W. Moore, Memphis, Texas; John H. Moores, Texarkana; Edgar Lee Ohlendorf, Lockhart; Leland N. Williams, Gouldsburg; William E. Winger, Silsbee; and Frederick G. Karle, Mercedes.

All the Sears winners are freshmen, except Karle, who is a sophomore.

Moorman scholarship recipients are James R. Stultz of Ballinger; Weldon A. Mauney, New Waverly; Vincent D. Neuhaus, Mercedes; Melvin R. Frei, Lott; and James F. Jackson, Nacogdoches, the only freshman in the group.

The Kroger scholarships went to Ronald M. Sells of Palacios and Monte C. Wainscott of Olney, both freshmen.

Three members of the Collegiate Future Farmers of America Chapter will conduct a parliamentary procedure demonstration at 1 p.m. Wednesday for the Future Homemakers of America Chapter at the A&M Consolidated High School.

Those who are to conduct the demonstration are Jimmy Nicholson, Darrell Kinnard and John Stevens. Jay Grimes is the team adviser.

Casting began Wednesday night for the Aggie Players' second production of the year, "The Glass Menagerie," by Tennessee Williams.

Faith Series Opener Set

A panel discussion on Ethics of Politics will be the first program in the "Faith and Life Series" at 7:15 p.m. Wednesday in the All Faiths Chapel.

Members of the panel will be State Sen. Bill Moore, State Rep. David Haines, Dist. Judge John M. Barron and Dr. John Orr, professor of philosophy and humanities at A&M. Rev. Bill Oclely, of the St. Thomas Episcopal Chapel, will be moderator.

The series is sponsored by the Campus Religious Workers Association.

Castings should be completed by next Wednesday, Vic Wiening, director of the play, said.

"We are taking a week to cast because there are only four parts to be had," he added.

Three or more players read for each part Wednesday. There are two male and two female parts.

The Players will present "The Glass Menagerie" Jan. 11-16.

Governor John Connally has proclaimed the week of October 25-31 as Texas Agricultural Extension Service 50th Anniversary Week, Director John E. Hutchison of the Extension Service announced today.

The week also marks the dates of Extension's state conference to be held on the A&M campus, Hutchison said.

The third and final Management Seminar of 1964 planned for managers in the Southwest opened Sunday at the Ramada Inn, announced Dr. John E. Pearson, head of the sponsoring School of Business Administration.

Twenty men from firms across the Southwest are expected for the weeklong seminar, Director W. E. Eckles said. The 10 participating firms to be represented at the seminar include chemical, electrical utility, oil, manufacturing, steel, insurance and other industries. Attendance is limited as individual participation is vital.
