Competition scheduled for the team this year includes the Southern Invitational Drill Meet at Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge in March, Fiesta Flambeau in San Antonio in April and Buccaneer Days in Corpus Christi in May. Other trips are planned if transportation is made available.

Team sponsors this year are Calvin Reese, assistant to the commandant; Capt. John L. Lorms, Military Science sponsor, and Maj. T. F. Hines, Air Science

Funds for team operation are provided by the Commandant's Office through the Exchange Store and by the Federation of A&M Mothers Clubs. Each boy usually must provide about $100 during the year, too.

The Freshman Drill Team is composed of both Air Force and Army cadets. They drill about one hour a day for the first month after selection and two hours a day afterwards.

Team members must maintain a 1.0 grade point ratio to remain

Rudder Tells History Club Of 'Rangers'

President Earl Rudder met with the History Club Wednesday night and spoke on the evolution and employment of his Ranger Division during World War II.

The Rangers were a crack collection of volunteers who played a major part in the Normandy invasion. Rudder was assigned the screening and training of the men and processed several thousand before deciding upon his unit.

Their objective was several large guns on Pointe du Hoc which were menacing allied operations. The Rangers scaled the cliffs on Pointe du Hoc with grappling hooks under grenading from the Germans above. They fought their way to the top and captured the guns which later proved to be one of the most important accomplishments of the invasion.

When asked what it takes to win, Rudder said, "It takes two things. Number one, brains, and number two, to know what they are fighting for. Put these two things together and you've got a great soldier or student."

Rudder said that what little military experience he had before entering the service proved to be most beneficial.

Only 23 per cent of his Rangers had attended college, however.
