

Profits Of Store Aid A&M Clubs

A&M student organizations as diverse as the Singing Cadets, Rodeo Club and Freshman Drill Team are among the many benefitting from the business acumen of Carl Birdwell and associates at the Exchange Store. The benefits take a readily appreciated form, money.

Exchange Store prices are competitive with "profits" distributed annually — much is channeled through the Memorial Student Center — in accordance with recommendations of the faculty-student Exchange Store Advisory Board.

The current distribution of $31,561 awaiting approval of the Board of Directors is typical of the annual grants.

Serving students, faculty and others on the campus has been Birdwell's major goal since he arrived to manage the Exchange Store. His career now spans nearly 40 years divided almost equally between the store here and the college store at John Tarleton Agricultural College from which he graduated.

Birdwell has been a wheelhorse in the National Association of College Stores. In 1954-55 he was national president.

"If I had the past years to relive in retail activity, I can think of no finer environment in which to spend that time than on a university campus catering to the needs of America's finest—the student," Birdwell said.

The Exchange Store now approaching the half-century mark of serving Aggies has never cost the taxpayers a cent, Birdwell points out. The two-story building housing the store was erected during the 1920s and now is almost outgrown despite additions built through the years.

Talk with Birdwell and two facts stand out.

First, few students realize how different campus life would be if it were not for the use of Exchange Store "profits" in supporting varied student activities.

Second, a college store sometimes answers odd, last-minute customer requests.

Not too many years ago someone decided that the Corps of Cadets should wear white gloves at the Thanksgiving Day game 11 days later. Birdwell managed to have the gloves here within eight days.

The years and experience have mellowed Birdwell into something of a campus philosopher. He is a self-described optimist "for a pessimist just won't last long in the business."

Six-Week Exams

In order to help give the A&M Consolidated High School students more to be thankful for this Thanksgiving, E. P. Ozment, the school principal, announced the following six-week exams schedule:

Monday, Nov. 23 ... periods 3 & 5
Tuesday, Nov. 24 ... periods 2 & 4
Wed., Nov. 25 ... periods 1 & 6

Visiting Prof To Present Seminar

Dr. W. S. Connor, visiting professor for the Institute of Statistics, will present a seminar on "Selected Topics on Block Designs" at 4 p.m. Friday in Room 115 of the Animal Industries Building.

The seminar is the first of a series of approximately seven which Connor will present at the same time and place on succeeding Fridays, said Dr. H. O. Hartley, director.

The seminars will assume basic knowledge of statistical methods (equivalent to Statistics 601 or 602), and will be introductory in nature.

"Dr. Connor has been with the U. S. Bureau of Standards and is one of the top men in the field of design experiments," said Dr. R. J. Freund, associate director.

Freund explained that design was the art and science combination of conducting experiments to minimize the effects of undesirable outside factors and to maximize the desired sensitivity of the experiments.

A&M Could Test Napoleon's Hair

"The Activation Analysis Research Laboratory at A&M is capable of determining the amounts of arsenic present in Napoleon's hair," Lloyd E. Fite, associate head of the activation lab, said Monday.

Fite made the statement when questioned Monday, after the Associated Press released a story about Napoleon's death from Glasgow, Scotland. It concerned evidence that led scientists there to believe that Napoleon had been slowly poisoned with arsenic.

"We have conducted atomic tests in our lab that were similar to the ones ran on Napoleon's hair in Scotland," Fite said.

NSF Fellowships Deadlines Set

Deadlines for applying for the graduate and summer fellowships programs of the National Science Foundation, will be Dec. 4 and Dec. 11, respectively, NSF coordinator C. M. Lloyd said.

Each program provides for graduate study in engineering, mathematics and the sciences including the social sciences, plus such overlapping fields as meteorology and oceanography.

Further information may be obtained from the NSF office in the YMCA Building.
